TRUDEAU WARNS:

New Programs Limited By Resources

By STAN McDOWELL
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau Monday fitted a catalogue of his government's accomplishments in a scholarly discussion of the challenge to modern parliamentary democracy.

He told the 28th Parliament that it must deal with problems that would have staggered a Macdonald or a Laurier. He warned of "a spreading concern that the traditional techniques of governments are incapable of responding adequately and in time to the changing needs of society."

And he got down to specifics to answer, point by point, opposition criticism of his government's position on poverty, Biafra and Czech refugees.

Meeting the demands of the old politics while awaiting the birth of the new, Mr. Trudeau replied to the non-confidence motion of Conservative leader Robert Stanfield by suggesting that the Opposition leader would have felt the motion necessary even if the speech from the throne "had been dictated by the Holy Ghost himself."

KEY QUESTIONS

Speaking after Mr. Stanfield on party leaders' day in the debate on the speech from the throne, Mr. Trudeau said the central questions facing the session were "about the kind of country in which we want to be living in and the directions in which we should be moving to build such a country."

He offered his answer:

"The people of this country want to live in a land with a rising standard of living, equitably distributed amont regions and individuals.

"They want a social security system which will underwrite the risks and hazards of modern life and provide minimum standards of health and welfare for every citizen.

"They want a country which is in the forefront of scientific and technical advance and which is adequately equipped with facilities for education and research.

"They want a society which has not lost sight of man's spiritual values, of his un-

Criticism From Paris Unanswered

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said today he does not intend to react to criticisms of him made in Paris Monday by French Foreign Minister Michel Debre.

Robert Thompson (PC—Red Deer) said the "extraordinary" Debre speech had accused the prime minister of making false statements. Would Mr. Trudeau complain?

"No," the prime minister replied. Then he added, with a grin:

"Even politicians of this country accuse the prime minister of making false statements."

Mr. Debre said in Paris that Mr. Trudeau had been badly informed about the activities of Philippe Rossillon, a French official accused by Mr. Trudeau of agitating among French-speaking groups in Canada.

More U.S. Troops Going to Europe

WASHINGTON (AP)—Defence Secretary Clark M. Clifford said today that 20,000 to 40,000 additional American troops would be sent to Europe sooner than originally scheduled for participation in NATO military manoeuvres. He told reporters the schedule for the manoeuvres had been advanced and the extra U.S. forces would be in Europe ready to participate early next year.

Constitution Talks Called by Trudeau

Premiers Invited To Fall Meeting

Times News Services

Prime Minister Trudeau announced in Ottawa today he has invited all Canadian premiers to a top-level constitutional conference in late November or early December.

He added in a reply to Creditiste Leader Real Caouette that he is still waiting for replies from the provinces.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield asked Mr. Trudeau to give the agenda for discussions which have been held by federal and provincial officials on the constitution.

Mr. Trudeau said the agenda was drawn up at the February constitutional conference and was made public then and is being followed.

The discussions of officials were being held in private. The provinces had been firm on this point and were "quite right" in their stand.

There was no immediate reaction from provincial premiers although most were expected to favor the idea.

QUESTION MARK

A major question mark was British Columbia's reaction but, with Premier Bennett in Europe on his annual overseas trip, this could not be determined immediately.

Acting government leader Kenneth Kiernan said he has not received any communication from Mr. Trudeau and he would not comment on the conference proposal "until I have studied the matter with my colleagues in cabinet."

It is unlikely that Mr. Bennett would reject the call although it is not beyond the bounds of possibility.

He was sharply criticized last fall when he ducked out of the Robarts Confederation for Tomorrow conference and sent former attorney-general Robert Bonner in his place and again was criticized when he left last February's milestone federal-provincial constitutional conference in Ottawa a day early, tagging the province with "the empty chair" symbol.

BACKS REFORMS

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson hinted that the provincial government did not wish to continue its image as a confederation "dropout" when last week he commented on the throne speech with the assurance that B.C. wishes to cooperate in constitutional reforms.

In Winnipeg, Manitoba Premier Walter Weir expressed his willingness to meet federal officials in answer to an earlier call for federal-provincial talks on shared-cost programs.

"We are aware of the importance of establishing priorities in government spending," the premier said in commenting on an announcement by Prime Minister Trudeau that a federal-provincial conference will be called this fall in an effort to trim the cost-sharing programs.

The winter works program, under which the federal government absorbed part of the labor costs of municipal projects, already has been discontinued.

Mr. Weir said he agreed priorities must be set but added the impact of cutting back spending must also be studied.

He had no immediate comment on today's call by the prime minister for talks on the constitution.

NATO TALKS SCHEDULED IN NOVEMBER

LONDON (UPI) — An emergency session of the council of ministers is being planned after the U.S. presidential elections to review military and defence strategy of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in light of the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia, diplomatic sources said today.

The sources said preparations already are being made for the meeting in mid-November at NATO headquarters in Brussels.

They said the emergency session will be preceded by top level consultations of NATO foreign ministers attending the UN general assembly in New York.

Biafran Citadel Falling

By ARNOLD ZEITLIN

LAGOS (AP) The Nigerian army reported capture of the Biafran town of Owerri Monday, shrinking the rebel territory to 10 per cent of its original size.

The seizure of Owerri left Biafra with only one major town, Umuahia, the headquarters of the rebel chief of state, Lt.-Col. C. Odumegwu Ojukwu. Federal troops, pressing from the north and the south, were reported only 30 miles away in either direction.

Biafra, formerly-Eastern Nigeria, was 29,000 square miles May 30, 1967, when Ojukwu declared its independence from the Nigerian federation.

It now has left approximately 3,000 square miles, into which some 6,000,000 persons, mostly members of the Ibo tribe, have fled to escape the advancing federal armies. The Ibos believe the Nigerians are trying to exterminate them.

But despite the steady advance of federal troops, the Biafrans showed no inclination to surrender. Information Commissioner I. Y. Eke said Biafra's "will to survive is unconquerable." This was considered an answer to the resolution by the Organization of African Unity calling on Biafra to surrender and restore Nigerian unity.

The federal announcement of the capture of Owerri said civilians were returning to the town and the Nigerian troops were caring for them.

FATE IN DOUBT

Among the refugees who had fled before the federal advance were scores of British and American wives of Ibos and dozens of Irish, German, British and Dutch Roman Catholic priests and nuns. Their fate was unknown, but the British High Commission in Lagos urged the Nigerian government to protect their lives if possible.

The Biafrans were reported still putting up resistance at various points. Informed sources in Lagos said Biafran forces had driven units of the Nigerian 3rd Marine Division from the lakeshore town of Ogutain, in the western sector. The town commands the southerly approaches to the Biafran airstrip at Uli-Ihiala.

Home Crisis Evident When Mortgage Due

By DENNIS ORCHARD

OTTAWA (CP)—People will tell you what's the matter with housing.

"My rent went up 24 per cent July 1."

"To get into a home I'll have to carry a first and second mortgage at $217 a month."

"It reduces a man's pride to send his wife to work so he can buy a home and pay for it."

"You can't justify taxing my income when you don't tax profit of land speculators."

"I don't want to buy my own house. I don't think government should lay out subsidies so others can."

These were some of the beefs, comments and problems that met Transport Minister Hellyer and his housing inquiry in a two-hour visit Monday night to an Ottawa housing development.

TRIED EXPERIMENT

It was an experiment—on the first day of the cross-country study—and the members of the inquiry were delighted with the results.

About 200 tenants of the $30,000,000 Bayshore apartment and town house development on Ottawa's western outskirts turned up for the session in a hot school auditorium.

They roasted landlord Irving Greenberg about his rents—typically $180 to $210—but he came back strongly with figures of his own about property taxes. And he closed the evening with a fiery attack on provincial and federal sales taxes that won applause.

A show of hands revealed that more than half the people want homes of their own—and can't afford a down payment.

OFFER SUGGESTIONS

Their suggestions to reduce housing costs and to make more homes available:

—Tax capital gains from the sale of land.

—Build more quality into urban development to save rebuilding costs in the near future.

—Put more money into rapid transit.

—Manufacture homes on a mass production basis.

Woman Shot To Death In Sudbury

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — An unidentified woman was shot to death and her male companion wounded today as they sat in a car behind a Sudbury hotel.

Witnesses said a lone gunman driving a car with Quebec licence plates drove up behind the couple at 10:05 a.m., got out and fired three shots at them.

"He fired one shot at the woman and she had it," said Glendon Monette, one of two witnesses. "Then he fired two more at the guy."

The woman was believed to be in her 20s.

Gordon Thrush, 38, of Sudbury was still conscious when taken to hospital with two bullets in his neck. He was listed in critical condition.

After the shooting, witnesses said, the gunman drove away at high speed. A .22-calibre rifle with the stock cut off was found under the Thrush car.

Opposition Flays 'Dull' Program

By JOYCE FAIRBAIRN
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Opposition parties Monday trained their guns on Prime Minister Trudeau charging that he has let the hopes of millions of Canadians drop with a thud.

The formal throne speech debate opened with non-confidence motions from the Conservatives and New Democrats which attacked the government for refusing to set out guidelines for its "just society."

Conservative leader Robert Stanfield's motion, which will be voted on Thursday, said the government had failed to recognize urgent economic and social problems or present Parliament with priorities to implement the just society.

David Lewis, in his first speech as acting NDP leader in the Commons, attacked the specific areas of housing, urban development, unemployment and poverty to the Tory motion.

For the first time since 1962 there is no numerical possibility whatever that the government could be defeated on either vote.

JUST FOKMALITY

With a clear government majority, non-confidence motions now become a matter of formality except in the unlikely event of a back-bench Liberal revolt.

As the throne speech itself failed to stir the blood, the opposition critics saw little on which to base a dynamic attack.

Leave Cyprus, Says Dief

OTTAWA (CP) — John Diefenbaker said in the Commons today Canada should withdraw its troops from the United Nations peacekeeping force on Cyprus and save the $3,500,000 a year it is costing to keep them there.

Prime Minister Trudeau said he would discuss the idea with the cabinet ministers involved.

Mr. Diefenbaker said Archbishop Makarios, the Cypriot president, had stated that Canadian troops could be pulled out without any danger to the future peace of the island. Canada alone was paying its own way in the peacekeeping assignment.

Canada has contributed to the force continuously since it was set up in 1964 to keep peace between Greek- and Turkish-Cypriots. There now are about 800 Canadian troops on the island.

Outside the Commons, Defence Minister Cadieux said the Canadian contingent will be reduced by 285 men in October during the usual rotation of Canadian troops.

MP Urges Complaint Probe

OTTAWA (CP) — A special committee of Parliament to investigate citizens' complaints about the abuse of authority by government officials was proposed today by Gerald W. Baldwin (PC—Peace River).

Speaking in the Commons throne speech debate, he said the committee should be given the widest powers to look into such complaints. Over the years much of Parliament's authority had been delegated to government departments and agencies and there should be a check on how it is handled.

Mr. Baldwin, the Conservative House leader, said action of this kind has been promised for years by the Liberals without signs of progress. The former prime minister, Lester B. Pearson, had told him four years ago something was being done.

Lack of such a check system was "a grave defect" in parliamentary democracy.

Discussing the reform of Commons rules and procedures, he said the government's proposals for the adoption of provisional rules in this session were made only the day before Parliament opened. They had not been acceptable to the Conservatives.

Mr. Baldwin said he agrees with most of Prime Minister Trudeau's philosophy on the need to make Parliament more efficient through rules changes. But the same kind of talk had been heard for years.

Rules were too important a matter to be left to House leaders of the parties. Their reform must be the subject of free and open debate, in Parliament, the press and the country.

He predicted that the government will shortly introduce its own rules proposals in the Commons and use its large majority to endorse them.

Poised Soviet Artillery Could Obliterate Prague

By GENE KRAMER

PRAGUE (AP) — Thousands of Soviet troops have big guns aimed at Prague to keep pressure on Czechoslovakia's leaders.

Heavy cannon, rockets and missiles point at Czechoslovakia's capital from all directions.

One military expert says there is more than enough artillery to destroy the 600-year-old city.

There are 24 big guns set up in alfalfa fields less than eight miles east of Prague. Their barrels point toward the capital. The guns appear to be 122-millimetre cannon with a range of more than nine miles.

A mile or so farther, five batteries of multiple rocket launchers point at the city.

A few hundred yards beyond the end of Prague's Strasnice streetcar line, two score Soviet T-55 medium tanks are parked, their guns directed toward the city.

Northwest of Prague, near the village of Hormerice, more than 50 big guns are concentrated within half a mile. They include at least 18 122-millimetre howitzers, six huge 152-millimetre cannon plus 85-millimetre guns and 57-millimetre automatic anti-aircraft batteries. Some travellers have also seen missiles mounted on tanks aimed at Prague from the east and several tank regiments.

Estimates of the total number of occupation troops ringing Prague range up to 90,000.

The guns are visible to Czechs picking apples in nearby orchards or passing on their motorcycles.

The implication is that all the hardware is there to frighten the people and intimidate their liberal Communist leaders to meet Soviet demands.

One major demand, for renewed censorship of press and radio, is being enforced. As a result, details are meagre on the continuing talks between Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vassily Kuznetsov and the Czechoslovak leaders.

The Soviet demands are also believed to include permanent stationing of Soviet troops at the West German border and tough action against Czechoslovaks who engaged in what Moscow regards as anti-Communist activity during the January-to-August days of liberalization.

Weatherman Denounced; Didn't Warn of Downpour

LONDON (CP) — Britons denounced their weathermen today for not warning them of the three-day downpour that flooded huge areas of souhteast England, caused three deaths and did millions of pounds worth of damage.

The floods covered hundreds of square miles, marooning families, isolating towns and villages and disrupting road and rail services.

Members of the House of Commons said that the meteorologists gave no indication Saturday of the dangers ahead and said they would raise the matter in the House.

The weather office chief, Dr. Brian Mason, protested:

"We haven't got a computer sufficienlty powerful to make an accurate forecast of the rainfall on a day-to-day basis."

Rain Monday night added a fresh threat to areas not already under water and hampered rescue operations by police and troops.

EVACUATE THOUSANDS

Thousands of persons were evacuated from inundated homes and housed in temporary quarters.

The British Automobile Association said that almost every stream and river in southeast England was at danger level.

Army amphibious vehicles were sent to Dalham, near Newmarket race course, where some places were under 11 feet of water. In Norfolk, the coastal resorts of Great Yarmouth and Lowestoft were cut off by flooded roads.

The weathermen forecast more rain today but added that drier weather was on the way.

With millions of gallons of water pouring down from hills and fields, no let-up in the four-day-old downpour is expected until at least Thursday.

Intervention At UN Considered

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Sharp said today Canada will raise the Biafra-Nigeria question in the United Nations if the Organization for African Unity does not.

In a Commons reply, he said the initiative should be left to the countries which are near neighbors of Nigeria.

Canada's interest is humanitarian, he declared. Canada would not want to intervene in the political dispute between Nigeria and the district of Biafra.

Mr. Sharp, under heavy pressure from opposition groups, said the Canadian government has been exploring the best means to bring the full weight of world opinion to bear on Nigeria and Biafra.

Opposition Leader Stanfield asked: "Are we going to the United Nations after all these people (in Biafra) are starved?"

Mr. Sharp said the Canadian government has made "strenuous efforts over a long period of time" to get food relief to Biafra. A proposed land corridor was refused by Biafra for fear that it would be used by Nigeria for military purposes. A tentative Red Cross plan for an air corridor was turned down on the same ground.

WHY NOT ACT?

"Now, why don't you act?" he asked.

Mr. Sharp said Biafra has accused Nigeria of attempting genocide, but "we do not know this."

Outside the House, Mr. Diefenbaker said he believes "absolutely" that the Nigerian forces are embarking on genocide in Biafra.

"It seems as clear as can be. Until a week or 10 days ago I was not convinced, but I have received a great deal of information on the subject in the last week and it seems clear that this is massive genocide against a weak and helpless people."

In answer to Mr. Sharp's statement that Canada is hoping the African states will take the question to the United Nations, NDP parliamentary Leader David Lewis said:

"Why can't we do it? Why leave it to the Africans?"

... HOME CRISIS

Mr. Hellyer and his group plan to talk to many other community groups as they bring government, Trudeau-style, to the people. Until the end of November they will visit two dozen cities and spend about half their time in formal session hearing briefs, the rest in the field.

BUILDERS TELL STORY

An afternoon hearing Monday in a committee room on Parliament Hill gave them the builders' side of some issues. But the National House Builders Association said its members blame their problems mainly on provincial and municipal governments.

Spokesmen said municipalities delay plans for residential developments because the costs of building schools for the areas cannot be supported by taxes available.

The delays often run to two years and cost developers $1,200 a house—charges that are passed on to buyers.

Lloyd Gunby, director of marketing for G. S. Shipp and Son of Toronto, said the average price of a serviced lot in the Toronto area now is $14,800.

E. L. Mayotte of Fort William, president of the builders association, said developments must be cleared by 40 separate government bodies in many Ontario communities.

"It sounds like a mad dog in a meat shop," commented Vancouver architect C. W. Pratt, a member of the inquiry.

Single Bill Will Amend Crime Code

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister Turner reaffirmed Monday that the government will present a single omnibus bill to amend the Criminal Code.

He said in the Commons that there is no difference of opinion whatever between himself and Prime Minister Trudeau on this point.

He was replying to Eldon Woolliams (PC — Calgary North) who asked whether the Criminal Code would be amended by one bill as proposed by Mr. Trudeau or by several bills as suggested by Mr. Turner.

A divided bill would permit separate votes on various amendments.

Mr. Turner also told Mr. Wolliams he will consider making public the recommendations of provincial attorneys-general on the federal bill.

quenchable thirst for beauty, for the pleasure of the mind and the body, and for companionship and solitude."

SELF-DEFEATING

But he warned that government action was limited by the supply of resources.

"It would be self-defeating," the prime minister said, "if the rate or incidence of taxes was to inhibit the growth of the economy."

He warned that existing government programs must be reconciled with the demands of the economy and new ones "must be justified in relation to all competitive claims on the limited supply of resources."

The processes of government itself, Mr. Trudeau warned, were challenged by the demands of the times and must prove "that a parliamentary form of government is not only capable of meeting the demands of this complex age but that it is more capable of doing so than any other form."

He said recent widespread involvement in political activities in Canada was heartening but warned of the "frightening" consequences "in other countries, and it is noted in some places of our own, of the alienation of large numbers of people from the mainstream of a country's political life."

LANDING RIGHTS

Turning from principles to specifics, the prime minister repeated External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp's earlier statement that a Red Cross airlift of relief supplies to Biafra had been balked by the refusal of landing rights by Biafra.

Opposition spokesmen had asked the government to supply aircraft to the Red Cross and criticized what they saw as government callousness.

Mr. Trudeau said the government had been aware of poverty in Canada before the Economic Council of Canada drew attention to it in its annual report.

He cited the creation of the department of regional development as evidence of his government's concern.

He said, in answer to other opposition criticism, that during the past weekend 280 refugees had arrived in Canada from Czechoslovakia, 267 of them on Canadian government sponsorship.

Another 266 persons would arrive on two flights this week, the prime minister said.

Mr. Trudeau also reported progress in review of defence and international affairs and cited previously-announced measures in such fields as agriculture, public works, communications and research in support of his government's record.

. . . OPPOSITION

devoid of any real compassion for the human problems of the individual.

Mr. Stanfield said Canadians had been given every right to expect Mr. Trudeau would produce an inspiring throne speech which would challenge, excite and articulate "a Canadian ideal."

Instead, they were handed a "flat, pedestrian document" which resurrected old items in an effort to try to "cover the nakedness of the just society."

The most serious failure of the speech, said Mr. Stanfield, was the simple failure of commitment.

A stranger reading the document would conclude that Canada was a land of "few problems and not one bit of passion — a country whose most serious business is to listen to lecturers about the nature of justice," he said.

NEW ADVENTURES

Mr. Lewis, one of Parliament's better debators, said he was sure the prime minister would agree that his very election indicated Canadians' willingness to be challenged, to accept a new approach and embark on new adventures.

"I venture to suggest that to challenge them, particularly the young, and having reached the pinnacle of power to let them down with a dull thump is the cruelest cut of all," Mr. Lewis said.

This was a sure way of undermining democratic participation and eventually undermining democracy itself, he contended.

"The promise was great, the performance is dismal," Mr. Lewis said.

"Somewhere, something happened to stop the 'swinger' in his tracks and to transform the promising modern into the dull traditional," he added.

Mr. Stanfield's chief preoccupation was the government's refusal to enunciate clear proposals for anti-poverty measures.

CASUALNESS

He said the most striking indication of coldness and casualness in the speech is that apparently there is plenty of room for the poor in the government's "just society."

"The poor man is to be emancipated as to his conduct in his bedroom; perhaps he will be able to buy a ticket in a lottery; perhaps he will be afforded better protection if he runs foul of the law," he said.

"But the same man may be living in wretched housing, perhaps without a job, perhaps one of a family not receiving the necessities of life like food and clothing, deprived of the opportunity for education or recreation and with no chance of enjoying scores of amenities which people receiving middle or higher incomes take for granted."

Where Canadians hoped for action, they received only a pendantic, legalistic lecture explaining that even a start on anti-poverty measures was a long way off, the Tory leader said.

Mr. Stanfield deplored that the government appeared to be confusing regional economic disparity and poverty in general. general.

He said it would be his party's task to hold the prime minister to his election promises to relive regional inequality.

Since the campaign a sophisticated apparatus of computers, brain banks, talent tanks and regional desks had been developed to deal with poverty, he said.

"But it is still the pork barrel where the action is at," Mr. Stanfield added.

Foreign Agents Blamed On Bilingualism 'Stall'

By STAN McDowell
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau made it clear Monday that he sees foot-dragging on bilingualism by the Manitoba government as partially to blame for the Rossillon affair.

His strong statement on linguistic equality struck the one note of passion in an otherwise cool and dispassionate delivery as the prime minister spoke in the House of Commons on the throne speech debate.

A reliable source confirmed that Mr. Trudeau was thinking primarily of Manitoba when he warned that until linguistic equality was achieved in fact as well as in law it would not be surprising if minorities were to look outside the country for support.

"It will not be sufficient for government leaders or public bodies to declare themselves in favor of bilingualism or even to pass legislation on the subject," the prime minister said.

A government spokesman revealed following Mr. Trudeau's speech that the prime minister is disappointed by the failure of some provincial governments, particularly that of Manitoba, to translate their announced and legislated policies on bilingual education into concrete action in the schoolroom.

STILL WAITING

Federal spokesmen say that although Manitoba's Bill 59, to allow French-speaking pupils to receive one-half of their day's lessons in French, was passed more than a year ago, French-speaking minorities in such communities as St. Boniface are still waiting for the legislation to make itself felt in the classroom.

Referring to recent protests by English-speaking Quebecers against the imposition of French-only education in the Montreal suburb of St. Leonard, Mr. Trudeau said it would be "tragic" if language disputes in one province were to interrupt progress toward linguistic equality elsewhere.

But he warned that "English-speaking Canadians must not allow a single incident to cause them to forget the basic principle that linguistic equality requires all provinces to recognize the right of parents to have their children educated in the official language of their choice."

In obvious allusion both to the St. Leonard incident and to the recent visit of French agent Philippe Rossillon to Manitoba, the prime minister warned that until linguistic equality was a concrete fact it should not be surprising if linguistic minorities looked beyond their provincial government or even beyond the federal government for support.

LAST TO CAST

"I would be the last to cast the stone at these minorities, especially the French-speaking minorities who have for decades been confronted with statements of intentions and who have very often had no authority to whom they could effectively complain," he said.

The prime minister renewed his argument that a constitutional guarantee is essential to assure linguistic equality for minorities in and out of Quebec.

He said he had been disappointed at the federal-provincial constitutional conference last February by the attitude of some provinces that did not agree to a constitutional guarantee.

Both Manitoba and Quebec governments argued against the immediate need for any such guarantee at the February conference.

As supporting evidence Premier Walter Weir cited the passage of Bill 59 and Premier Daniel Johnson referred to Quebec's record in assuring English-language rights.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

1.52 inches of rain fell at Vancouver during the 24 hours ending at 5 this morning. Tofino set a new September record with 4.26 inches during the same period. This amount eclipsed the 4.17 inch mark set just six hours previously and the 3.25 inches recorded at Tofino on Sept. 1, 1967.

A ridge of high pressure building over the coast behind the Pacific storm which crossed the lower mainland early this morning will produce a clearing trend in coastal areas today and in the interior this evening.

Acknowledge the Trend

STUDENTS NOW ENROLLING at the University of Victoria will raise the campus population to nearly 5,000—a total which by original estimates was not supposed to be reached for another two or three years. To these will be added part-time and other students who will place a further strain on the university's facilities. But while classroom and office space may be found for the forthcoming session, it is clear that further construction must take place soon if the functions of the university are to be adequately carried out.

Each hundred new students means several new classes, and classes require teachers. Teachers need offices; both professors and students need increasingly larger library facilities; science classes require laboratory space, and the growing complex calls for a larger administrative centre. No matter how economically the institution is run, its rapid growth demands expansion of buildings. As of now, the only construction in which the university at Gordon Head can indulge is student residences, which with a relatively small down payment can be financed through federal government-sponsored mortgages to be repaid out of rents.

Clearly the provincial government is faced with the prospect of substantial building grants — and these will not be confined to the Victoria campus. But the same demand is apparent also in operational financing. Already the University of Victoria has had to postpone courses of study for training in nursing, social welfare and other disciplines, because of lack of funds, and these are areas in which there is a recognized shortage of trained workers.

We live in an era in which knowledge and education in the use of knowledge are the keys to our survival. The growing complexity of our society, the vast technological advance of the past two decades, the demands of scientific progress, the unprecedented problems of expanding populations, and the intricacies of operating a complicated democratic political system — all these point to the necessity of more thorough education for more people, of education to the limit of each individual's capabilities.

Such a situation should put education at the top of government priorities in spending, not only as a human necessity but also as an investment; for the joint high-education-high-productivity of the United States is clearly evident.

In the British Columbia context, the University of Victoria has been a poor second to Simon Fraser as regards government support. The latter institution, an overnight mushroom creation, naturally called for large initial funds to meet its special needs. But Victoria, although not as spectacularly endowed in architecture as Simon Fraser, has an equally valid claim on government support. The fact that grants per student last year were at the rate of $2,155 for Simon Fraser and $1,542 for Victoria, and are estimated to be in the same proportion for 1968-69, shows a disparity that has not been satisfactorily explained by the government.

A special committee under Dr. Neil Perry, deputy minister of education, is now examining the situation. The committee should come up with some sound recommendations both on the total amounts to be expended on our universities and the relative shares which each shall receive. There can be no government waffling on this problem despite already large appropriations. High educational costs are a fact of life in this age, and cannot be evaded without disastrous consequences.

Parochialism Will Not Help

THAT CANADIANS IN SOME parts of the country are better off than those in other regions is a fact of our nationhood. Despite efforts to level them out over the past 40 years the imbalances have persisted. The Economic Council of Canada in its recent review noted, "the stark fact remains that the historical mix of market forces and public policy has not resulted in significant narrowing of regional income disparities."

The Council analyzes the failings of some past programs and suggests new avenues for investigation. It emphasizes the need for the federal and provincial governments to maintain close consultation on the problem. The Review notes that the constitutional study set up at a federal-provincial conference earlier this year provides scope for airing possible conflicts between national and regional economic goals and for suggesting how they can be reconciled.

That was the conference, it will be recalled, that Premier Bennett didn't bother to attend. As one of the "have" provinces—ranking second only to Ontario—British Columbia has a special obligation to work toward the improvement of conditions for Canadians living in not-so-favored areas. The parochialism too often displayed by Mr. Bennett is detrimental to the nation's unity.

Federal spending on special transportation projects in the poorer provinces is regarded by the Economic Council as not especially effective in accelerating regional growth. Like other assistance in the form of area development funds and equalization payments it serves to help maintain the lagging areas in relation to the richer provinces but does not get to the root of the problem. The need is to provide a spur that will lead to elimination of the imbalance.

In this regard, the Review says future policy must be aimed at a "levelling up" among regions to higher standards of economic performance, rather than bringing down the richer areas. It suggests that the manpower training program promises to be one of the most effective in raising the level of productivity where it is lowest. The Council urges further study of this and other measures and says the federal government must be prepared to experiment with policy innovations and development techniques.

The need for action is undeniable. Premier Robichaud of New Brunswick suggested at the recent Canadian Bar Association convention that the situation is as great a danger to Canadian unity as cultural or linguistic differences. "The Canadian federal system can operate effectively only if some areas of the country are not at a significant economic disadvantage when compared with others," Mr. Robichaud said. He could have been speaking to Mr. Bennett.

A Time to Look Forward

WHILE THE WESTERN DEmocracies, in a frustrated mood of all-aid-short-of-help, have watched Russia extinguish Czechoslovakia's brief bid for intellectual and political freedom, the people of the satellite country have submitted bitterly, but with an unspoken slogan of all-capitulation-short-of-defeat.

Although the Soviet power will clamp down on the Czechoslovak people, the freedoms they knew in the past and revived this summer will not be forgotten. The people of Prague may take added encouragement from the fact that the world itself is changing, the global environment for freedom is improving, and Russia itself must feel and be influenced by the great tide of this century. The day of world war to rescue a submerged nation is of necessity past, but world trends of another type, perhaps stronger in the end, are now being felt. And Czechoslovakia will be a beneficiary of their inevitable development.

Oil: Too Much, Too Little and Too Soon

THOSE who regard economics as the dismal scince would have been shocked by some of the astronomical economic projections unveiled before the Oil and Gas Conservation Board here recently. Some of the reports of the sessions read more like excerpts from Alice in Wonderland than the product of engineering economics.

Gray

The occasion was the application of a consortium of huge American oil companies to build a $192-million plant to extract 80,000 barrels of oil a day from the Athabaska tar-sands. The plant cannot be built without prior approval because of the Alberta Government policy of holding back tar-sand development until the market can absorb the increased production.

Hits Opposition

Only one tar-sand plant has been approved so far. It has failed to reach its productivity targets and has been plagued with start-up problems. It has a potential capacity of 45,000 barrels a day and wants to increase that to improve its economics.

The newest proposal has run smack into strong opposition from Canadian independents and other American giants. The opponents argue that Alberta's conventional oil is only being produced at half capacity now, that any more tar sand crude will simply take away the markets from conventional oil.

Not so say the consortium economists. By 1974, the United States will be so fearful of relying on far-off Africa and the Middle East for its oil supplies that it will remove all restrictions from Canadian exports. Then, by 1980, the United States will have to be importing 5 million barrels of oil a day, much of it Canadian. That compares with present imports of 3,000,000 barrels.

Giants Challenge

This whole concept is challenged by opposing giants, who produce projections to show that the United States will increase rather than decrease its use of Arab state crude. And the picture is clouded further by projections based on the recently discovered rich oil reserves on the north shore of Alaska, 400 miles west of the Canadian border.

The Alaska discoveries have generated a state of oil industry euphoria unequalled since the Rainbow discoveries. There is talk of the field extending all the way into the Mackenzie River delta, with a pipeline to bring Alaska and Mackenzie oil 1,500 miles up the Mackenzie and then 1,700 miles to Chicago.

This billion-dollar pipe line could pick up a lot of tar-sand crude enroute and make the new tar-sands project more economical. On the basis of two spectacular Alaska wells, the experts are estimating Alaska reserves at from 5 to 10 billion barrels. The rush to get in on the play on the Canadian Arctic shore is on.

What everybody is ignoring is the fact that if oil is discovered in the Canadian Arctic, it will be the world's highest cost petroleum. Moving a drilling rig down the Mackenzie to Inuvik will cost a minimum of $300,000. Drilling to the estimated depth of the oil zone at 10,000 feet will run at least $700,000 more per well.

Fantastic Expense

Getting the oil out after it is discovered and the fields developed will be fantastically expensive. Cost estimates a pipeline to Edmonton run all the way to $1 billion. To take the Alaska crude over two or three rugged and high mountain ranges to a warm-weather port on the south coast of Alaska has been estimated to cost twice that much.

The not-yet-discovered Yukon crude would probably cost $1.00 a barrel at least to pipe it to Chicago. Unhappily, there is no market in Chicago for either the proposed tar-sands crude or the not-yet-discovered Mackenzie basin crude. It will take a lot of inter-company pressure to get conventional, already developed, Alberta oil into the Chicago refineries in volumes sufficient to expand Alberta's oil production.

Hurt in Collision

If and when the northern Alaska crude ever reaches market, it will undoubtedly run smack into Canadian crude now being exported to the Puget Sound area. In that sort of collision, Canadian exports are bound to suffer. Indeed Canadian exports to Washington are already being cut back 50,000 barrels a day to make room for newly developed crude being produced in southern Alaska, and Southern Alaska production is a flea-bite compared to what has been found on the north shore, if the economic analyses of the industry are taken seriously.

If the tar-sands consortium gets permission to spend its $192 millions, it's plant will not be in operation before 1973. By then, what the condition of the American export market will be is any economist's projection.

By CHARLES BARTLETT

Elections: 'A Mood of Bitter Negativism'

THE George Wallace phenomenon, an aberration apparently destined to persist, is pulling Richard Nixon back to the hazardous priorities of his 1960 race, a preoccupation with the conservative vote that precludes any real reach for the Negroes. The national conventions failed to cap the Wallace surge. In fact the mood of bitter negativism has been so stirred by the events in Chicago that Wallace is now a swelling and not a diminishing factor in the border states. He is the largest cloud on a national horizon which seems bright with promise to Nixon.

Bartlett

Strategists in both camps use a rough rule of thumb that the first ten per cent of the Wallace vote is a Republican defection and the next ten per cent comes out of Democrats and Independents. When Wallace threatens as he does now to carry states like Tennessee and to lay claim to one out of five voters across the country, he must be counted a major menace by both candidates.

The Democratic hope is that it will be easier for Humphrey to pluck Democrats away from Wallace than it will be for Nixon to win back the conservatives. His tactics at least can be consistent with his national startegy, which is to arouse liberal sentiment by lumping Wallace and Nixon with the forces of regression.

Since Democratic defections to Wallace derive largely from the laboring class, the AFL-CIO is undertaking a massive program of education with literature which underlines Wallace's segregationist commitment and his neglect, as governor of Alabama, of the workingman's concerns with education, unemployment benefits, and the right-to-work law.

Task More Shadowy

Nixon's task is more shadowy. He has said that he will never attack Wallace by name. He must argue that a vote for Wallace is a vote for Humphrey and with extreme subtlety make the point that he is close enough to Wallace and far enough from Humphrey to deserve support from those who want a change.

He is doing this in the South by emphasizing his interest in Wallace's catch-issues: the Supreme Court, big government, the restraints upon the military in Vietnam, and of course lawlessness.

Beyond this Nixon must rely on missionary work by men with standing in the states he wants to carry. Leaders like Strom Thurmond who are not running will be helpful but one big problem is that many Southern Republican leaders do not want to risk their local races by getting caught in the tugging match between Nixon and Wallace. The presumption is that people who vote for Wallace will vote Republican for the lesser office.

Lack of Sensitivity

It is easy to see why Nixon is tempted to weigh his chances in the border states more heavily than his Negro support. His polls show that while he won some 30 percent of the Negro vote in 1960, he is the present choice of only seven per cent of the Negroes.

His choice of minority aides, a flashy group of rich Negro public relations men, and his clumsy handling of Sen. Edward Brooke, are symptomatic of a lack of sensitivity in this area.

A young lady jolted a small party which Nixon gave at the outset of his travels by asking Brooke, "How does it feel to be the house nigger?" After a few days of having the candidate point to him as a symbol of Negro potential, Brooke concluded that the feeling was not a comfortable one and his future role in the Nixon campaign is not at the moment clear.

The 1960 pattern holds two hazards for Nixon. The potential Negro vote is 8 million, twice what it was in 1960. Neglect of the Negroes can be decisive in close states, even in border states like Texas where there are 600,000 potential Negro voters or in Florida where there are 400,000.

More important, if he fails to embrace the aspirations of an impatient minority in his drive for the White House, his promise to bring law and order to the land will hold little meaning.

Looking Back

From the Times, Sept. 17, 1908.

The Alquonquin Lumber and Power Company of Toronto has purchased the holdings of the Quatsino Pulp Company, embracing 75,000 acres of pulp wood on Quatsino Sound, Vancouver Island, for $114,000.

It is the intention of the purchasers to erect a modern pulp mill on the lands. The initial investment will be a quarter of a million dollars and the machinery has already been ordered.

Sewage Disposal

Mayor Curtis asks Saanich voters to support the September 28 Sewer Referendum, stating that the Council is unanimously in support of it. I am not impressed by this unanimity. Our Mayor and Council were and apparently are still unanimous in the opinion that raw sewage can be safely dumped into the sea. Their attitude of mind clearly has been "We will put in treatment plants only if Mr. Loffmark forces us to do so." . . .

As to the costs of the proposed consolidation of systems, it would be much more equitable if these were levied on assessed values (generally the equivalent of ability to pay) rather than on a flat rate on each parcel. The small home owner will bear a proportionately higher cost under the proposed system if it is approved by the voters.

Our Mayor and Council may not be aware of it, but on the Saanich Peninsula there is currently being planned a first class residential subdivision, the sewage from which will be disposed of on the land entirely within the subdivision. This plan is based partly on the work of Dr. John Winneberger of California. Would it not be to our Council's credit if, instead of planning to increase Saanich's contribution to sewage in the sea, with or without treatment plants, it asked Dr. Winneberger for his advice?

My conviction is that Council should delay ALL sewer extensions until such studies are made.

By defeating the September 28 Referendum, Saanich electors will show our Mayor and Council that this must be done. We must make certain that political prestige and profits are not put ahead of public health and the beauty of our community. — Gordon H. Campbell, 1515 Oakcrest Drive.

Premature Arrival

I would like to draw the attention of the public to the appearance in a downtown store, on Sept. 12, of a Santa Claus designed to promote the sale of Christmas toys. The outcry, sparked by the CJVI Conference line, against such flagrant poor taste, resulted in a public apology by the store manager and the withdrawal of the offending saint.

However, the incident merely points up the fact that each year such appearances occur earlier and earlier. Surely it is time for the retail merchants group to set their house in order and agree, in time for this Christmas, on the earliest permissible date for the appearance of Santa Clauses in the local stores. Say December 11. This need not preclude the sale of seasonal goods before this time.

That the women of Victoria feel very strongly about this matter would have been obvious to any businessman listening to CJVI that morning, — Mrs. Bis Whitby, 3016 Admirals Rd.

Ontario Next?

Ottawa Citizen

With major federal-provincial shared cost programs to be scrutinized at a forthcoming conference of finance ministers, Prime Minister Trudeau indicates the provinces will have an opportunity to discuss the operations of medicare.

There will, however, be no special federal-provincial conference on the health scheme, though some provinces have requested it.

Nor should there be. The principles of the medicare program are sound, and should not be watered down to lure holdouts into the scheme.

Nova Scotia has now announced its readiness to negotiate an entry in the scheme, and New Brunswick is expected to follow. Manitoba is apparently prepared to make new representations.

There remains Ontario, which above all others can surely afford to provide a guaranteed level of health care to its people.

Upside Down

New York Times

In the United States, the racial crisis is taking new, bewildering forms. Negroes who once clamored for integration now identify themselves as black and insist upon a heightened sense of racial identity and racial power. The slogans of the 1950s have been turned upside down. Federal civil rights laws have laid the necessary basis for legal and political equality, but few can agree on how to invest that formal equality with economic and social content. Many whites meanwhile have grown weary of ceaseless clamor and racial strife. Under a truce flag emblazoned "law and order," they demand an immediate cease-fire in the battle for social change.

It's All Done With Gentility, The Beastly Talk About a War

By MURREY MARDER

PARIS—"Chers amis, bonjour". The tone is warm, not facetious. Twice a week, the so-styled "dear friends" of North Vietnam in the international press corps assemble to hear the Hanoi delegation's greetings and guidance on the Paris peace talks.

There is no quibbling, in this forum, over who is friendly, hostile or neutral. Hanoi is out to teach all, indiscriminately, its recipe for peace in Vietnam.

In no other East-West conference on a conflict in process has there ever been such formal courtesy demonstrated among opposing interests.

There is no glowering, shouting or boorish shoe-banging such as the Russians once used to display in moments of cold war crisis. There are no beastly little tricks like cutting down the legs of United States delegates chairs to give them lower stature, as was done at the opening session of cease fire talks on the Korean war.

Here there is enough North Vietnamese-inspired handshaking on display at each press briefing, and in each official talk session behind closed doors, to gladden the palm of the most outgoing Rotarian.

Nguyen Thanh Le, the Hanoi delegation's spokesman, is an old pro in the propaganda business. Off the speakers platform, he is a small bird-like figure of traditional Asian courtesy who extends his hand, as do his subordinates, to as many newsmen as they can reach.

Words Bristle

At the rostrum, as Le recounts and amplifies the stand struck by Hanoi's chief negotiator, Xuan Thuy, the words themselves bristle, but the tone does not.

Even the senior United States negotiator, Ambassador W. Averell Harriman, and his deputy, Cyrus R. Vance, were a bit incredulous at first over the contrast in words, tones and behavior.

They would find Thuy, or his deputy, Col. Ha Van Lau, approach them with outstretched hand and smiles in the "tea break" recesses, after uttering some such horrendous accusation as:

"Over 40,000 women including a great number of young girls and nuns have been raped" by "the U.S. and its lackeys" in South Vietnam: "Over 5,000 people have been buried alive or disembowled and their livers plucked out."

This contraptual mixture of scurrilous, or even fiendish, accusations, delivered deadpan against U.S. policy by Hanoi diplomats who display the greatest gentility in personal relations with Washington envoys who officially represent that policy, has long since lost its novelty here.

His Own Blend

But it seems to exemplify the unusual amalgam of Vietnamian and Marxist strains evolved in a generation of Ho Chi Minh's leadership of North Vietnam to produce his own blend of communism.

Some experts maintain that the pattern of North Vietnamese diplomatic behavior here is added evidence that Vietnam's communists are more Vietnamese than Communist.

This is a long-standing debate: in any case, it can be said without dispute that the style of North Vietnam's diplomats here is noticeably different from the style of other communists.

It clearly does not mean, however, that because they are courteous, they are tractable. The North Vietnamese in Paris display a single-mindedness, a tenacity, in pursuit of their objectives, that would be admired in Peking or Pyongyang, even more than in Moscow.

Unlike communists from many other nations, the North Vietnamese here, newsmen as well as diplomats (the distinction can indeed be a narrow one), show no interest in dialectical discussion of the the state of the world.

They managed to sit in Paris seeming unconcerned through May and June while a near-revolution mounted in France and President de Gaulle deflected the student-worker challenge by charging that France was threatened with communist engulfment.

Hanoi's envoys here equally divorced themselves from discussion of the recent tumultuous events in Czechoslovakia, although North Vietnam publicly endorsed, in the name of communist "solidarity," the Soviet-led intervention which raised havoc with world communist unity.

Self-evident

Hanoi delegation spokesman Le, indicating surprise that anyone should seek any relationship between the two topics (although Czechoslovak-made weapons are a major item in the supply of weaponry for North Vietnam's army) ended all questioning on the subject by stating as if it were a self-evident fact: "The Czech problem is the Czech problem and the Vietnam problem is the Vietnam problem."

A sort of grim little game is played by the North Vietnamese in the official talks and in the news conferences: it could be called "catechism."

The object, as the Hanoi delegation plays it, is to see how many questions can be converted into the answer which represents North Vietnam's priority demand in this conference, from which it will not be deflected:

"The United States government must immediately and unconditionally stop its bombing and all other acts of war on the whole territory of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam (North Vietnam), in order to discuss, thereafter, other questions of interest to both parties."

LE

Once, in the formal meeting, inordinately patient U.S. ambassador Harriman, after hearing the phrase, or indistinguishably slight variations of it, repeated week after week, month after month, asked his counterpart Thuy whether he would have to hear the same stereotyped phrase repeated endlessly.

Said Thuy, leaping to the opportunity:

"Yes, as long as the United Stated does not unconditionally cease the bombing and all other acts of war over the entire territory of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam, we will say this phrase until the United States does unconditionally cease the bombing and all other acts of war over the entire territory of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam."

Everybody got a chuckle out of that when Le delightedly related the exchange to newsmen, especially the North Vietnamese themselves. The normally most sober-faced Le, on occasion, at what newsmen have come to call their "catechism class," also will allow himself a grin when he has reached especially far out to turn a newsman's question around so he can answer it with the unconditional bombing cessation formula.

The technique is indeed Pavlovian and standardized Marxist: but it is normally unaccompanied elsewhere by the good-humored twinkles sometimes seen here. Yet this by no means signifies that the demand is regarded by the North Vietnamese as an unwarranted or frivolous one.

This is the Vietnamese side of their style, in Paris. But it is equally part of their communist style, in North Vietnam, to celebrate there, with the utmost determination to arouse programmed fanaticism, an annual "hate the U.S. week."

Early in the Paris talks, which began last May 13, Hanoi delegation chief Thuy said, "We have restrained our just and deep hatred to come to Paris for official conversations with the U.S. side. The whole world has realized that this fully evidences our good will."

Was this simply rhetoric? Probably not. In the modern-day history of Ho Chi Minh's Vietnam, there is a love-hate relationship which relatively few Americans know, but which is vivid to Vietnamese Marxists.

'Sophistry'

The declaration of Independence of the Independent Republic of Vietnam, as it is formally called, proclaimed on Sept. 2, 1945, declares:

"All men are created equal. They are endowed by their creator with certain inalienable rights, among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Familiar? of course; it was copied directly by President Ho from the American Declaration. In those days, the United States was supporting the principle of Vietnamese independence from French rule.

There is one simply-explained theme to the fundamental latter-day North Vietnamese attitude toward the United States, which North Vietnamese officials and newsmen unfailingly remind Americans of in Paris in informal as well as official discussions with them.

It is — precisely in accord with Hanoi's official doctrine — that the United States, especially for the past 12 years, since the elections proposed in 1956, by the Geneva Agreement of 1954 — has conspired and manoeuvred and distorted the record to "cheat" North Vietnam out of an independent, unified, Vietnamese state by contriving to detach South Vietnam from it.

Do the North Vietnamese really believe this? On the basis of extensive official and private conversations in Paris during the past four months, the answer must be, in the judgment of most observers on this scene, an unqualified "yes".

Created Equal

All the challenging questions raised in the opposing U.S. rationale about the virtual certainty that North Vietnam never would have permitted anything approaching free elections in all of Vietnam in 1956; that, instead, North Vietnam eventually launched a "war of aggression" against the South when the South failed to fall readily into Hanoi's hands, as North Vietnam fully anticipated when it made the 1954 agreement, are dismissed by the North Vietnamese here, in private as well as official talk, as "sophistry."

Do the North Vietnamese really believe this when they say it? They almost certainly do.

Do they truly believe that the United States has suffered "continual defeats" in the war in Vietnam and that it was "compelled" by these "defeats" to open talks in Paris because of the "failure" of previous U.S. policy in Vietnam? There is every indication in Paris that this is just about precisely what they think.

A recurring "revelation" in the history of international relations is that in fact most nations believe, or come to believe, essentially what their propaganda says.

Building Shell

The core of what is believed is embellished by deliberately contrived claims of specific victories or accomplishments; but in time even most of the manufactured claims are absorbed into the body of what is "believed", as a crustacean builds its shell by accretions from the sealife surrounding it.

The odds, for example, are fairly strong that when North Vietnam premier Pham Van Dong said on the Sept. 2 anniversary of North Vietnam's independence that his nation is in the process of winning "total victory" over "the richest and most powerful (nation) in the world today," that in a large measure he believed what he said.

This type of claim probably is intended at least as much for exhortation as for prediction purposes. Hanoi's leaders may miscalculate, but they are not stupid; they are not talking of vanquishing the United States in any absolute military terms; they are talking of forcing it to conclude that the struggle is too costly to the United States, domestically and internationally, to pursue.

Right now, North Vietnam is taking what amounts to a major gamble, in American values, at least, on its reading of the public climate and the politics of the United States. It is not a field in which the North Vietnamese, by all evidence available in Paris, have great expertise.

Swift Replay

Hanoi's experts and envoys have created the impression, among some American observers, by the swiftness with which they pick up and replay comments and statistics about the United States that are advantageous to North Vietnam's interests, that they are indeed quite acute in discerning what is happening on the American scene.

But, according to some of the most knowledgeable observers in Paris, this knowledge of what moves and shakes life in the United States is indeed superficial. The Hanoi delegation here privately recognizes that, and in recent weeks it has launched special efforts to repair the gaps in its knowledge.

Private discussions here with North Vietnamese sources, especially since the assassination of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy—which it is privately reported that Hanoi's analysts originally attributed to the ferment over the Vietnamese war — indicate that Hanoi's experts are groping with renewed intensity for a broader understanding of the power structure in the United States.

North Vietnam's negotiators condemn the Vietnam positions of both Hubert Humphrey and Richard M. Nixon, as well as President Johnson's.

Xuan Thuy told newsmen at a diplomatic reception here: "It matters little to us whether Johnson, Humphrey or Nixon is president of the United States—they're all the same."

However, Hanoi, as Harriman noted, is showing extraordinary interest now in U.S. politics.

Nevertheless, Hanoi's negotiators give every indication in Paris of holding their present unyielding line through the American election campaign—unless there is a shift on the United States side.

And if the bombing should be halted, it is guaranteed, members of the U.S. delegation here are convinced, that there will be a most difficult, gruelling negotiation ahead.

The four months of talks in Paris have proved in fact to be what they euphemistically were labelled at the outset, for the diplomatic convenience of both sides—"official conversations"—not "negotiations"—they have produced knowledge, if not results.

With the odd combination of courtesy and obduracy on display here, the United States has learned much about North Vietnam's Communists that will be required to reach any agreement. Hanoi, hopefully, is learning something more about its adversary, too.

'New Romans' Gives Sour Image From Distorting Mirror of U.S.

The most talked-about book in Canada today is "The New Romans: Candid Canadian Opinions cf the U.S.," a collection of essays and poems by some of our best-known writers. Published by M. G. Hurtig Ltd. of Edmonton, it is available in paperback for $2.95. It is reviewed here by Anthony Jenkins.

"Worry not, rumor has it that God is dead. If so, he can't bless America."

Most contributors to this anthology of Canadian opinion on the U.S. see very little to bless in the imperial monster south of our border.

The book is packed full of personal feeling; it was deliberately planned "in absolutely biased terms."

Al Purdy, the Edmonton poet, and Mel Hurtig, the publisher, hit upon the idea of asking a number of Canadian poets, novelists, political economists and intellectuals to write exactly what they felt about contemporary America. Revealingly, only four out of 15 Quebec writers bothered to reply. The total contributions were then whittled down to some 50 entries. The result is a bitter, lively and patchy book.

The surprising thing is that the book is really as much about Canada as it is about the U.S.A. Indeed, several of the essays avoid mentioning the U.S. at all.

Even more oddly, this is the book's real strength. The U.S. seems to have acted as a huge distorting mirror for these Canadians and has triggered off a great deal of agonized self-analysis.

J. M. S. Careless, a historian from the University of Toronto, puts his finger on much of the emotion behind the book when he remarks that "it is small wonder that Canadians are thoroughly ambivalent in their response to the United States ... they have always been utterly involved. One is tempted to conclude, in fact, that there could not be a Canada without the United States — and may not be a Canada with one. That uncertainty adds a delicious touch of piquancy to an otherwise bald and unconvincing narrative."

The book's weakness, on the other hand, is the amount of repetition, though perhaps that is inevitable in a collection of this nature. When the writers produce straightforward analyses of the current situation, we are told ad nauseam that the U.S. rules Canada's economy, that the U.S. rules the West and is the world's most dangerous imperialistic force, and that the U.S. itself is ruled by violence: "gunmen rule the Pentagon and a gunman sits in the White House."

Most of this is pretty old hat, and presumably most people who would read this book (i.e. those interested in the world around them) could be expected to have thought these things for themselves.

However, some of the writers do indulge in some pretty scary fantasy beyond this. For instance, a number of them wonder out loud about what would happen if Canada should elect an NDP government, take a blatantly anti-U.S. stand, or seize this country's Amerian industries; fighting in the streets and resistance fighters galore!

Because of this rather repetitive material, the writers that make the greatest impact are those who take the most personal angle.

There is, for example, a poignantly beautiful essay by the novelist Margaret Laurence which is quite stunning in its compassion and humanity. Having seen a newspaper photo of a young Negro boy lying wounded from one of the haphazard bullets let loose in the Detroit riots, she thinks what she would feel were the boy her own son.

The dignity and control of this "open letter to the mother of Joe Bass" offers a telling rebuttal to the violence and hatred in American life. But the letter is also a fascinating document of the way Canadians feel bound up with the evils that taint this continent.

"Mrs. Bass. ... I know the many-sidedness of that country in which you live. I know the people I love there, who are more heart-broken than I at the descent into lunacy. Also, I am a North American — I cannot exclude myself from the dilemma. I cannot say them. It is forced upon me to say us."

Some of the essays are pretty silly (notably Ray Smith's and Lionel Kearns'), and it's a shame that a lively mind like Dave Godfrey's should be represented by a warmed-over piece from a magazine that is not particularly apt.

For the individuality of their approach, if for nothing else, I hope that readers of this book will not skip past the poems that intersperse the essays. They are compact, explosive and idiosyncratic thoughts upon the subject at hand, such as Margaret Atwood's vision of an America that desecrates its natural environment in the quest for farther and farther horizons.

It is no accident that the poets tend to see more sides to the argument than the prose-writers do. Irving Layton's poem cocks a snook at the whole debate in a cheeky paean to American life.

Mr. Layton may have thought that the other contributors would pour self-righteous scorn on the battered old eagle. In fact, the significant thing about this book is the absence of this holier-than-thou attitude. All the writers search their consciences, and for the most part, those that feel forced to condemn their neighbor do so in anguish.

They are aware that if the Americans are the New Romans, then Canadians are like the legion of the tenth (Romans who intermarried with the barbarians). To continue the analogy, the most optimistic of them find hope in the fact that out of this intermarriage may come someone like the historical King Arthur ("dux romanorum") and the idealism of Camelot.

Perhaps the Canadian solution to North America (whatever that will be) can salvage that which is intrinsically good. Naim Kattan puts it this way: "Can one safeguard human values; can one avoid conformism, while still having full access to the civilization of today? In other words, will Canada be able to keep its own character while availing itself of all the advantages of American life?"

But will this book, with its ideals and its bitterness, have any significant effect on America? Probably not.

But even if we are only talking to ourselves, the book has some point to it. It will not only remind us of our abject submissiveness to U.S. policies but of the responsibility we share for what is good and what is bad in North America.

Funny.
It doesn't look
Italian.

Actually, it's more Italian than it looks. Italy is famous for beautiful performance cars. So it isn't surprising to see another new shape worth looking at and owning. Now, if you still (in the back of your mind) think of Italian cars as small, underpowered, chunky square boxes, you better take another long look, then look again.

The Fiat 124 Sport Coupe has Gran Turismo stamped all over it in styling. And the performance and handling of a genuine sports car to match.

The entire car, for that matter, is something to see. Every inch of styling, outstyles a lot of the more expensive G.T. types at twice its price. (Just $3545*)

The inside is as beautiful as the outside. Padded dashboard; wood-grain panelling; racing wheel; tachometer; central console controls for ventilation and heating; plus variable speed windshield wipers. (And the list of extras included without cost, goes on.)

Four, deep-cushioned contour bucket seats surrounded by space to spare. And we mean it's a real 4 seater. And from every seat there's a clear view of what's up front, to the sides and behind. See it for yourself, you'll know what we're talking about.

Performance?

Another beautiful story. Power comes from a ninety-six horsepower engine with twin overhead cams, 5-bearing crankshaft and an aluminum head.

Transmission is a beautiful, smooth all-synchro 5-on-the-floor. And when you want to stop. Four power-assisted disc brakes do it smoothly, evenly and fast.

FERRY FEE REDUCTION SOUGHT

PORT ALBERNI — A petition, seeking reduced rates for Vancouver Island residents who use B.C. ferries, has been launched in Port Alberni.

The petition requests that Island residents should be given free passes three or four times a year, or a much reduced rate for cars and passengers.

It argues that the ferry from Nanaimo to Horseshoe Bay is a Trans-Canada Highway link and forms the only access, not only for pleasure, but also for cases of necessity.

Copies have been placed in a number of Port Alberni stores and several banks by a small group of local residents headed by Art Harrington.

So far more than 500 signatures have been received.

Mr. Harrington is urging other Vancouver Island groups to circulate similar petitions in other municipalities.

The petition will be forwarded to MP Richard Durante in Ottawa when it is completed. The Trans-Canada Highway is mainly the responsibility of the federal government, although the ferries are operated provincially.

Four to Run In Sooke Byelection

A byelection in the Sooke school district 11 days from now will see two candidates for each of the two vacant trustee seats.

The elections Sept. 28 follow the resignations last month of board chairman John Bartanus, who is moving, and trustee Mrs. Grace Robinson, who has stepped down for personal reasons.

Nominations closed Monday leaving this picture:

William James Stephenson, 6676 Goodmere Rd., a saw filer, and Claude MacDonald of Seagurt Road, an accountant, will contest Mr. Bartanus' unexpired term which runs to the end of 1969.

Robert Anderson of 2321 Sooke River Rd., personnel manager of Sooke Forest Porducts, and Ronald Fitton, 6470 Sooke Rd., a radio and TV serviceman, will contest the three-month unexpired term of Mrs. Robinson.

Returning officer Mrs. M. E. Colclough said voting hours Sept. 28 will be 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. and polls will be at Jordon River school, Port Renfrew school, Saseenos school, Sooke school and Shirley Community Hall.

Both contested seats are in the outlying Milne's Landing area of the school district.

STOPPAGE DELAYED

Hearing Expected On CPR Dayliner

A public hearing is expected to be ordered before the Canadian Transport Commission rules on CPR's application to stop dayliner passenger service between Victora and Courtenay.

In a Monday decision, the commission's railway committee ordered CPR to maintain the six-days-a-week service until a final ruling is made.

The railway had applied to discontinue the passenger run on the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway Oct. 12.

Councils and regional boards along the up-Island portion of the run have written to the federal commission objecting to the CPR application.

ONLY ALTERNATIVE

They argue the route is the only alternative to the Malahat Highway connecting the capital and suggested the service could be profitable if CPR changed schedules to begin the daily return run at Courtenay rather than in Victoria.

In making its application, the railway company said passenger traffic was not sufficient to pay the cost of maintaining the operation.

A spokesman at that time said if the federal government ordered the service continued, an agreement would probably be made whereby the government would pay 80 per cent of the operating loss.

Today a spokesman said CPR had no intention of changing its application to discontinue and had not considered any schedule changes.

No date for a public hearing has been set.

The commission's decision also affects CPR plans to discontinue a number of Ontario trains.

Nanaimo's Mayor Frank Ney has said that if a public hearing is to be relevant, it must be held on Vancouver Island.

Shopping Mall Plan Revived for Duncan

DUNCAN — Success of the recent "Bonanza Daze" in downtown Duncan has made city consulting engineer Russell Potter revive his plan for a permanent shopping mall.

In August, the Duncan-Cowichan Chamber of Commerce sponsored a western-style shopping spree, and Station and Craig streets were closed to traffic for two days.

Mr. Potter first put forward his plan in 1959 but it did not stir council to act upon it.

A revised plan will be considered by the present council when the members return to their desks from this week's Union of B.C. Municipalities' convention at Vancouver.

Mr. Potter said, "We were very interested in the Bonanza Daze and feel this is the sort of celebration which should be an annual event.

CONSTANT BUILDUP

"It will build up constantly and become a well-known summer spectacular."

The engineer said the mall he and his associates have in mind could be either permanent or temporary. Each of the structures would be installed so they could be lifted up and stored during the winter.

Mr. Potter's plan would only call for closure of the east end of Station Street between Canada Avenue and Craig Street.

"We think this sort of development will become quite common in a few years and Duncan might be a place where it could be developed first."

Mr. Potter recalled the one day a week farmers' market which used to be held in Duncan and said it could be revived as part of the new shopping mall.

Duncan Mill To Open Soon

DUNCAN — The new $450,000 Cowichan Co-operative Services mill at Koksilah is expected to go into operation in November, manager Walter Taylor said Monday.

The completely electronically controlled feed mill will replace the downtown Duncan plant destroyed by fire in April.

A warehouse, farm supply centre and offices will also be housed in the new complex, which will have 125-foot-high feed tanks.

Mr. Taylor said that a device will be installed to prevent pollution.

"Theoretically we could have built this mill downtown without creating a nuisance to residents."

A staff of 14 will be employed.

Two Charged With Robbery

NANAIMO—Two youths who escaped from Bannen Lake Boys' school were charged Monday with armed robbery, breaking and entering and escaping lawful custody. Police said the charges followed incidents in which a youth was held at bay with a hatchet in one home and a man was threatened with a knife in another.

Workers May End Mill Dispute

GOLD RIVER, B.C. (CP) — Pulp mill workers employed by the Tahsis Company were to meet today to decide whether to return to work after a dispute involving maintenance workers. The company says union members refused to do maintenance work and the mill was forced to close for repairs, but the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada maintains the men were locked out last Wednesday.

NANAIMO GRIT TWICE LOSER

NANAIMO (CP) — Liberal candidate Mladen Zorkin, defeated in Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands June 25, spent almost $11,000 more than his successful NDP opponent, the late Colin Cameron. In reports released Monday, Mr. Zorkin reported contributions of $11,279, compared to Mr. Cameron's $425, included a $40 contribution from B.C. Hydro co-chairman Dr. Hugh Keenleyside.

Lung Cancer Rate Highest Among U.K. Male Immigrants

VANCOUVER (CP) — Male immigrants from the United Kingdom have a lung cancer death rate twice that of Cnadian-born citizens in British Columbia, says a report in the current issue of the Canadian Medical Association Journal.

The report was written by Dr. Peter Coy, a U.K. immigrant now working with the B.C. Cancer Institute, Dr. Stefan Grzybowski, associate professor of medicine at the University of B.C. and J. F. Rowe of the provincial government's vital statistics division.

It says that the annual mortality rate for every 100,000 people in B.C. has risen from five deaths in the early 1930s to 33.5 deaths in the 1960s'

The death rate for 1960-62 was 21.2 for Canadian-born residents, 39.2 for U.K. immigrants and 30.4 for other immigrants.

The report says the death rate for U.K. immigrants is also higher than the rate for Canadians in Ontario and Saskatchewan.

It says studies in New Zealand, Australia, South Africa and the United States, also showed the lung cancer rate of U.K. immigrants was higher than the local population, but lower than the rate of their homeland.

"As far as lung cancer is concerned, British-born subjects are better off living in other parts of the world, including Canada, than remaining in the United Kingdom," the report says.

Employees of the B.C. Telephone Company established quite a record last year and they are proud of it.

But records are made to be broken, so they have set out to do even better this year. Better in what?

Better in giving to support community welfare organizations and activities, and especially United Appeals.

Chances are they will do it, too, because telephone employees don't leave such things to chance. They are organized. In some communities, they establish their own teams to canvass telephone employees for the United Appeal.

In others, they have set up a Telephone Employees' Community Fund to co-ordinate raising of funds for distribution to the United Appeal and dozens of other community welfare groups.

They Run It

The Telephone Employees' Community Fund in each case is operated and controlled by telephone employees, who organize the appeal, conduct the canvass and determine the distribution of the money raised.

The fund is administered jointly and without charge by representatives of the Federation of Telephone Workers of B.C. and the B.C. Telephone Company, so that every dollar pledged goes to support community services.

And the number of dollars pledged grows every year. There is no telling exactly how much telephone employees have given in direct dollar aid to community services in British Columbia, since many contribute directly to the agencies involved.

But more than $600,000, including nearly $85,000 pledged in 1967 campaigns, has been given through Telephone Employees' Community Funds since the first of these organizations was established in 1956.

Quite A Record

That is quite a record. And it is quite apart from B.C. Telephone's corporate support of community services. It is also separate from the many hours of time telephone employees throughout the province contribute to community activities.

There are more than 7,200 B.C. Telephone employees in British Columbia. They work and live and raise their families in cities, towns and villages across the province. They are your telephone people and your neighbors.

And their support of community services is just one more way in which they show their determination to be your good neighbors.

Grits Seek New Port Rail Route

The B.C. Liberal caucus Monday sharply criticized B.C. Hydro's plan to build a rail link to the proposed Roberts Bank super port which would be routed along the Boundary Bay waterfront.

The caucus, meeting in Victoria, demanded the federal and provincial governments intervene by over-ruling B.C. Hydro and establishing a new rout in consultation with the Lower Mainland Regional Planning Board.

Causus chairman Allan Williams, MLA for West Vancouver-Howe Sound said the party supported the planning board's proposal that a shorter and direct extension of the Canadian National Railway be built instead, to avoid destruction of watefront amenities.

He said B.C. Hydro's route was chosen solely for convenience of rail traffic and its disregard for the preservation of recreational and residential potential along the waterfront marked it as "a bad corporate citizen."

"A decision predicated on this narrow ground should be unacceptable to government for government exists to take into account all factors and, in particular, the public interest," the caucus statement said.

"The interests of the average citizen, the interests of the affected municipalities, the interest of future generations in need of housing, recreational and agricultural land cannot be ignored.

"As it now stands, the B.C. Hydro, in consultation with public and private railroads, has made a decision which is a classic example of arrogant disregard for the people and the people's interest."

Incumbent Of Ancient Post Dies

LONDON (AP) The fifth Marquess of Cholmondeley—pronounced Chumley — died Monday night at the age of 85. He had held the post of Lord Great Chamberlain, England's oldest hereditary office, under King Edward VIII again under Queen Elizabeth until he retired in 1966.

The Lord Great Chamberlain is in control of the Palace of Westminster, the home of the British Parliament, and has an important role at all state ceremonies at which the monarch is present. The office dates back to 1133 and is held in turn by three families of descendants of the Earls of Oxford.

Between Lord Cholmondeley's two terms in the post, the Earl of Lancaster held it during the reign of George VI. Lord Cholmondeley's older son and heir, the Earl of Rocksavage, holds it now.

George Horatio Charles Cholmondeley served as an officer in the Boer War and in the First World War. He was also an authority on fine handwriting and was president of the Society for Italic Handwriting.

He is survived by his wife, two sons and a daughter.

Insurrection Charge Unproven Say Critics

CHICAGO (AP) — A program presenting Chicago's official version of disorders during the Democratic national convention produced scant new information and showed little of police clashes with demonstrators, critics contend.

Leaders of the peace demonstrators said Sunday night after the television and radio broadcast that the city did not prove its charge that the protestors planned to discredit the United States government.

However, Robert J. O'Rourke, a Chicago alderman and Republican candidate for state's attorney, said the program "clearly documented how the police crushed a well-organized plan for insurrection."

Mayor Richard J. Daley, a Democrat, ordered the program produced because he said telecasts during convention week presented a one-sided account of the street violence.

The one-hour show, titled What Trees Do They Plant? and subtitled Strategy of a Confrontation, was broadcast by more than 140 television stations across the U.S.

The show concentrated on comments from police officials and previously televised interviews with demonstration leaders.

David Dellinger, 50, chairman of the National Mobilization Committee, an umbrella group for demonstrators, said city officials "failed to build a case to justify either the extreme violence of the police . . . or to substantiate their reckless charges."

Sidney Lens, co-chairman of the committee, criticized the documentary for omitting footage of police clubbing demonstrators.

Frank Babcock, the film's narrator, said the demonstration organizers were "hard-core radicals with three objectives: to disrupt the convention, paralyse the city and discredit government by discrediting the police."

The program showed little of the bloodiest conflict, the club-swinging violence that took place Aug. 28 in front of the Conrad Hilton Hotel.

As scenes from the 18-minute confrontation flashed on the screen, the narrator observed, "not a shot was fired, no one was killed and few spent even a night in a hospital."

Vatican Document Backed Contraception

LONDON (AP) — The Times publishes extracts from what it says was a secret document which the Vatican would have issued had Pope Paul approved artificial birth control.

It says the document, entitled Pastorales Indications (Pastoral Approaches) was prepared by the papal commission on birth control as the basis of an intended encyclical.

Extracts printed by The Times say the church, having already recognized the legitimacy and even the duty of regulating births, should no longer condemn artificial birth control methods employed "in a spirit of true, reasonable and generous charity."

As quoted by The Times, the document says the means of birth control should be chosen by husband and wife with the aim of exercising "a healthy and responsible parenthood," ensuring health of parents and children and upholding personal dignity.

The extracts suggest that the majority of the papal commission on birth control was not merely ready to accept artificial contraception but was strongly in its favor.

The Times says the full text of the document will be published next month in a book on the controversy to be entitled On Human Life. This was the title of the Pope's encyclical reaffirming the traditional Roman Catholic ban on artificial contraception.

Lack of Students Stalls School Start

VANCOUVER (CP) — A French-language kindergarten failed to open on schedule here Monday because there were too few students.

L'Alliance Francaise, which had planned to run fall kindergarten classes at its new Centre for French Studies, said the project will be held over, at least until January.

"We will have to see if we have enough students then," said an official, who declined to say how many registrations had been received for the proposed fall term.

The kindergarten was planned chiefly for English-speaking youngsters whose parents wanted them to learn French.

The French government contributed $5,000 toward the new centre, and is paying the salary of the director for three years.

The Quebec provincial government contributed $6,000, the British Columbia government $5,000.

Kindergarten fee was $100, plus a $3 registration fee, for the September-December term. There are free kindergartens, in English, as part of the public school system in Vancouver.

A French-language kindergarten in suburban Coquitlam also is part of the regular school system, and is free.

Loyalty Assumed, Says PM

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau said Monday that the Queen was not mentioned in the throne speech because loyalty to her was well understood.

Ommission of any mention of the Crown in the speech has caused considerable comment among opposition members and could crop up repeatedly in the debate this week.

Conservative leader Robert Stanfield Monday said if Mr. Trudeau was planning to disavow the Queen he should do so openly.

"Let him explain this breach of precedence and courtesy which cannot but help disturb and offend countless Canadians who care deeply about the Queen," Mr. Stanfield said.

Mr. Trudeau dealt with the matter briefly at the beginning of his speech.

"We are not among those who feel the need of constantly protesting our loyalty on this subject," he said.

Powder Packet Poses Problem

City police are looking for the owner of a 50-pound box of stump blasting powder found in the middle of Hillside Avenue near Quadra Monday.

Two motorists, Jack Walker, 658 Sedger, and Jim Vasper, 580 Sedger drove over the box without incident and later reported its presence to the police.

The box contains 20 per cent CIL Polar Stumping Powder police said.

FLOOD BOGS DOWN FLIGHT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Twenty passengers Sunday missed a charter flight from London because of heavy flooding in southern England. A Pacific Western Airlines spokesman said the plane, which arrived here Monday seven hours behind schedule, had waited in vain for the missing passengers.

SHARP RISE IN EXPORTS AIDS WILSON

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain cut its overseas trade gap by £51,000,000 (about $132,600,000) to £30,000,000 about ($78,000,000) in August, the government announced today.

British exports during the month rose by £27,000,000 (about $70,200,000) to a record £537,000,000 (about $1,396,200,000).

Re-exports were unchanged in August at £19,000,000 (about $49,400,000).

Imports fell by £13,000,000 (about $33,800,000) to £652,000,000 (about $1,695,200,000).

The board of trade said export growth was particularly strong in recent months in sales to North America.

August's import figure, the board said, might still be inflated by the aftermath of tariff cuts at the beginning of July and by imports from France delayed through the French political crisis.

SUBJECT TO CHANGE

The figures issued are provisional and may be subject to minor amendment later.

They showed that imports exceeded exports and re-exports together by £96,000,000 (about ($249,600,000), compared with the revised July figure of £136,000,000 (about $353,600,000).

But when so-called invisible exports such as insurance and shipping revenue are taken into account, the gap narrowed to £30,000,000.

The figures provided a political boost for the government of Prime Minister Harold Wilson, who has been pinning hopes on an economic upturn this year.

The news was reflected on the foreign exchange market where the pound sterling bobs up and down responsively to British economic fortunes.

Sterling jumped 21 points, from 2.3859 against the U.S. dollar to 2.3880.

In Zurich, the trade figures for August gave sterling a 15-point boost in the foreign exchange market today.

Within minutes of the announcement the pound was being quoted at 2.3870 against the U.S. dollar compared with 2.3858 immediately before.

Refugee List Keeps Growing

CALABAR (Reuters) — Only 200 tons of food and medicine are reaching nearly 500,000 refugees living in squalid conditions in this southeastern Nigerian state, a Swedish Red Cross nurse said today.

"It is not only in Biafra that people are starving, as the world thinks," said the nurse, Ulla Forshamn, 26. "They are here as well."

Miss forshamn is based at Uyo near Ikot Ekpene, which gained worldwide attention following reports of refugees dying in prison while vultures waited on the walls.

"It is terrible," Miss Forshamn said. "The first week it was difficult to sleep after watching people dying and starving to death."

She estimates that there are 250,000 refugees in private homes and refugee camps, with perhaps another 200,000 hiding "in the bush."

But the situation is improving, she said. "Before, five or six children died in my clinic every day, and now there are only one or two."

Nevertheless, life is returning to normal in these rain forest villages, which rejoined federal Nigeria in the last six months. There is an almost continuous scene of smiling, waving people for whom the 14-month-old Nigerian civil war against Biafra is over.

A United States Red Cross medical team leader said the amount of food arriving in the area was "far too little."

"It works out at less than one pound per person per week," he said, admitting that this does not include refugees still in the bush.

Most of the civilians in Ikot Ekpene have been moved to Uyo, a bustling market town where children with arms and legs like twigs plead for money and food.

But they are the lucky ones. Many others do not have the strength even to beg.

RACE CONGRESS TO BAR WHITES

ST. LOUIS (Reuters) — The Congress of Racial Equality, considered by Negro militants to be a conservative organization, adopted a new constitution Monday that advocates separation and bars white membership.

The new constitution was adopted at CORE's national convention here.

Three Areas Study Merger

KIMBERLEY (CP) — City officials and representatiges of Chapman Camp and Marysville villages are awaiting a decision from Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell on possible amalgamation of the three communities. The new city of 8,000 would be known as Kimberley.

Viet Senator Sees Large Red Invasion

MONTREAL (CP) — The head of a South Vietnamese delegation touring Canada says Communist forces are using the Paris peace talks to pull a "Czechoslovakia" on South Vietnam.

Senator Huynh Van Cao is one of six Vietnamese senators of his country's foreign relations committee seeking "new understanding and support from the Canadian people in the face of the aggression."

He said the North Vietnamese are using "the same tactics Russia used so successfully during the Czechoslovakian crisis, when they appeared to negotiate with (First-Secretary Alexander) Dubcek while preparing a full-scale invasion underground."

Senator Huynh said in a weekend interview these tactics were also used during the Tet offensive when "we agreed to a ceasefire, only to be attacked right in the middle of it.

"And while they talk in Paris they step up their rocket and terror attacks against our cities and manoeuvre for new offensives."

Ottawa Probes 'Tax Free Plant'

OTTAWA (CP) — An investigation is being made into the income tax position of a chemical and oil refinery project at Come-By-Chance, Nfld., being built with provincial aid, Finance Minister Benson said in the Commons Monday.

He said the question has arisen of whether this and "several other companies" are taxable and an investigation would soon be completed.

Max Saltsman (NDP—Waterloo) raised the issue in the House, referring to an editorial in the magazine Canadian Petroleum that says Premier Smallwood of Newfoundland and a private promoter have worked out a deal that will avoid income taxes on the Come-By-Chance plant.

Douglas Harkness (PC—Calgary Centre) said the Newfoundland operation could cause "very serious disruption" in the Canadian petroleum industry. In times of over-production, a tax-free producer could undercut competitors.

LOAN GUARANTEED

Canadian Petroleum says that under a deal arranged by Mr. Smallwood and American promoter John Shaheen the province will guarantee a $30,000,000 loan to be repaid by Mr. Shaheen over 30 years. At the end of this period Mr. Shaheen can buy the refinery at a nominal sum.

During the life of the agreement the plant will be owned by a provincial Crown corporation, the magazine adds, which will enjoy an exemption from income tax, provincial sales taxes of building materials and property taxes.

GRAIN

WINNIPEG (CP) — Prices were generally easier with most action in oilseeds in light trading today on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange.

Flax trading was mixed and there was some inter-month spreading. Exporters were buying on the scale down. Scattered commission house selling and hedge offerings in rapeseed met thin commercial support.

Oats and barley were barely active and there was thin exporter buying in rye.

Lakehead prices for class two, IWA and domestic wheat all were down ⅛ cent.

CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat futures fell more than three cents and set seasonal lows again under liquidation on the Board of Trade today. Trade in all pits was fairly active and mixed.

Rain in some sections of the country tended to influence buying of soybeans and corn futures. After these prices had advanced about a cent, profit-taking entered the pits and both commodities declined.

Block Industries

An 89 per cent increase in net income for the first six months of 1968 accompanied improvement in all divisions of Block Brothers Industries Ltd. of Vancouver.

The real estate company reported Friday it earned $739,460 in the six-month period, compared with $386,898 in the same six months of 1967.

Total income for the six months ended June 30 rose to $3.88 million, compared with $2.61 million for the same period in 1967. Share earnings were 50 cents this year, up 20 cents from earnings in the same period last year.

Crude Production

Crude oil production in Saskatchewan in May decreased to 6.88 million barrels from the total 7.72 million for the same month in 1967, the provincial department of mineral resources said Friday.

Production of crude oil for the first five months of 1968 was 36.37 million barrels and was valued at $82.95 million compared with 37.64 million barrels valued at $86.83 million for the same period last year.

There were 5,548 wells producing crude oil in May.

Occidental-Patino

Occidental Petroleum said Sunday it will not go ahead with a plan to acquire a controlling interest in Patino Mining Corp., a Toronto-based firm.

The announcement came from Occidental's Board chairman, Dr. Armand Hammer.

Previously, the company announced its agreement with Companie de Bonos, Acciones y Negocios Industriales, SA Cobanisa, of Panama, to purchase that company's 58-per-cent stock interest in Patino Mining.

Occidental was given until Sept. 14 to decide whether to buy 2,490,000 Patino shares at $50 a share.

Bank Thriving

VANCOUVER (CP) — "Our acceptance into the market has been beyond anything I expected."

The man talking to reporters was Albert E. Hall, the president of the fledgling Bank of British Columbia.

In the two months that elapsed since Canada's newest federally-chartered bank opened its doors for business, the Vancouver-based bank has moved ahead rapidly, but cautiously.

It has taken in about $7 million in deposits in 10,000 accounts following its July 18 opening in the downtown financial district, said Mr. Hall, a former vice-president and director of the Toronto-Dominion Bank.

"New accounts are coming in steadily every day."

The bank, which has ultimate plans to break into the eastern market, will open three more B.C. branches before the end of the year, said Mr. Hall. They include a second Vancouver branch, a Victoria branch and a New Westminster branch.

What about 1969?

"Just a 'guesstimate'—another five branches."

ONE OF SMALLEST

The bank is one of the smallest in Canada. It has about 11,700 shareholders who contributed capitalization of $2.8 million in $25 shares that were sold in lots of four shares.

Bank of B.C. shares, listed on the Vancouver Stock Exchange, sold Monday at $22.75.

Mr. Hall said the bank includes in its list of depositors a provincial government agency that has a small account.

"There has been no interference from the government," he added.

"There are always government funds available for short-term deposits but we haven't bid for them yet because we have not needed the money. When we do need such funds we will bid for them along with the other banks.

White House a Bit Dismayed by Boom

By HOBART ROWEN
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — You wouldn't expect them to say so out loud, but Johnson administration officials would be delighted with a little bad economic news. Not a great deal, but just enough to make their forecast of a slowdown look better.

The fact of the matter is that the buoyancy of the economy, in the face of the deliberately deflationary fiscal package passed in June, has surprised everybody.

To be sure, no one expected or desired the 10 per cent tax surcharge and spending limit to turn the economy around on a dime. But no one expected, either, that retail sales would boom along in July, August, and the first week in slowdown to avert a big inflationary bust next year.

And the August dip in unemployment to a rate of 3.5 per cent left the forecasters truly flabbergasted. The plain fact is that the current stream of business news and statistics doesn't match official expectations.

Why, when all of the expressed worry out of the White House has been about "overkill," should this pattern be a concern? The simple reason, according to economic council chairman Arthur M. Okun, is that the nation needs a modest slowdown to avert a big inflationayr bstu next year.

●

Although Okun hasn't said so, if the economy continues to show all sorts of boom-like overtones, the Federal Reserve, which has tended to move toward a lower interest rate pattern, is likely to freeze in its tracks.

"To the naked eye," says Humphrey adviser Walter W. Heller, the picture is "surprising and puzzling."

Some things, however, are clear. As Heller points out, consumers often have had a "delayed-reaction response" to changes in their pay envelopes. Thus, after the big tax cut in 1964, it took a couple of months for spending to surge ahead. Perhaps, he argues, consumers will soon begin to retrench.

On the other hand, there begins to be the suspicion in Washington that the actual ceiling on federal expenditures will be more illusory than real. Congress next year may choose to puncture some of the limits it has set.

The other big sector of the spending "trinity"—business capital investment—doesn't seem headed for retrenchment, according to new surveys of prospects for 1969.

SOCIAL STRUCTURE THREAT

QUEBEC (CP) — A Quebec economist said Monday that even though the Canadian economic outlook for 1968 was good, "our social and political structures" are imperiled by rising prices, regional enequalities and poverty.

Addressing the opening session of the Canadian mines minister's conference, Marcel Belanger said the social upheavals seen across the country, "the strikes, the protests and the marches," were related to these economic problems.

"Canada's growth climbed four per cent last year but productivity increased only by 2.8 per cent," he said.

Mr. Belanger said that Canadians want to live better at a faster rate than our production capacity will permit.

He said wage increases of 6-8 per cent granted is the past few years had been "clearly inflationary" as productivity increased only by 2 or 3 per cent in the same period.

He denounced union demands for parity with United States workers' salaries "as U.S. production is 25 per cent higher than Canada's."

Price Hike 'Economic Setback'

By CHARLES C. CAIN

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. announced a price increase on its 1969 models which was promptly criticized by United States government economists as "a severe setback to the cause of price stability."

"If it becomes the pattern for the industry," President Johnson's Council of Economic Advisers said in a statement Monday, "it would cost the American consumer $750 million."

Chrysler said the increase averaged $84 or 2.9 per cent above the current suggested retail price.

An Associated Press computation put the average price of Chrysler's 172 different 1969 models at $2,917.44, an increase of $128.11, or 4.4 per cent over the average price of 160 1968 models which could be compared with the 1969s.

READY FOR CRITICISM

In an apparent attempt to meet government criticism ahead of time, John J. Riccardo, Chrysler's group vice-president for U.S. and Canadian automotive sales, included the following statement in his price increase announcement Monday:

"The government's own figures from the bureau of labor statistics for July, 1968, show that new car prices have declined by 17.9 per cent in relation to all items included in the consumer price index, since the 1957-59 base period. These same figures also show that this is the best record on retail prices established by any major group of consumer products in the past 10 years."

In its statement, issued by committee Chairman Arthur M. Okun, the Council of Economic Advisers said: "We urgently request the other automobile manufacturers to head off this dangerous inflationary threat."

Ford, General Motors and American Motors are expected to announce new prices for 1969 models within the next two weeks.

Chrysler and Ford in 1966 and Chrysler in 1967 rolled back their first announced price increases when GM came up with smaller increases.

ROSE LAST YEAR

Last September's final price increase for all the Big Three averaged more than $100 a car.

Chrysler cited increased labor and material costs as key reasons for the price boosts on the new cars which go on sale Thursday.

Prices as released by Chrysler for the 1969 models did not include the seven-per-cent federal excise tax, dealer charges for handling and preparing new cars for customers, shipping charges and state and local taxes.

In addition to boosting the base price of virtually all of its 1969 line, Chrysler upped the prices of optional items and cut its new car warranty coverage. This reduction—expected to be followed by other auto-makers—had been rumored for months as most manufacturers are reported to feel they had gone too far in the warranty battle.

Chrysler left the power train warranty at five years or 50,000 miles—whichever comes first—thus continuing unchanged its guarantee to the customer that the engine, drive shaft and other car propellants would provide satisfactory service if properly maintained.

For the rest of the car, Chrysler cut its warranty in half—from 24,000 miles or 24 months to 12,000 miles or 12 months—and it said the warranty would cover only the original purchaser of the car.

Johnson Blasts Firm

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Johnson today condemned Chrysler's auto price hike as a "sharp blow" to the fight against inflation.

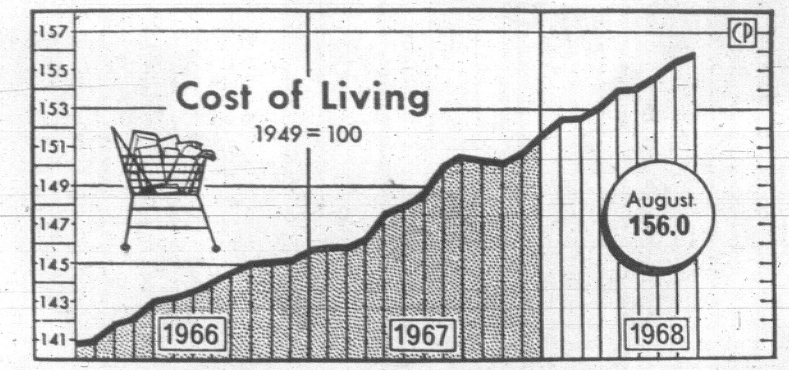
He urged car manufacturers to "exercise restraint and responsibility at this critical hour" in the effort to combat rising prices.

Johnson said the price boost announced Monday was excessive and an "onerous and unfair burden on the consumer."

"The cabinet committee on price stability has informed me that there is absolutely no excuse for the Chrysler action and that this price increase should not stand."

"No major industry has benefited more from the prosperity of recent years than the automobile industry. No major industry has a greater stake in protecting that prosperity.

"So today, I urge the auto manufacturers to recognize the public interest and exercise restraint and responsibility at this critical hour in the nation's battle against inflation."



FOOD COSTS were entirely to blame for a .4 cost of living increase during the month of August. The Dominion bureau of statistics index rose from 155.6 in July to 156, and compares with 150.9 in August 1967. The indicator is still based on 1949 prices, the base being 100. (CP Graph)

Newsprint Rising $5

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian International Paper Co. today announced a $5-a-ton increase in the North American price of its newsprint, effective Jan. 1.

The increase, which brings the price to $147 a ton f.o.b. New York, was attributed to mounting pulpwood and manufacturing costs, including wages.

I. H. Peck, president of CIP, said in a statement that the price increase of 3½ per cent "falls far short of the additional costs which our mills have been forced to absorb."

There was no immediate announcement from other major newsprint firms of plans to follow suit.

Spokesmen for both Domtar Ltd. and Consolidated-Bathurst Ltd. said only that the price situation is being reviewed.

CIP noted that the last newsprint price increase was $3 a ton in March, 1967.

Mr. Peck said increases since March, 1957, total only 10 per cent, "which is less than one per cent per year."

MONTREAL (CP)—The U.S. dollar in terms of Canadian funds was unchanged at $1.07 5/16. Pound sterling was up ¼ at $2.56 5/16.

SHELL
32 SECRETS
How to squ
more miles
gallon of

What happens to your mileage if you drive with worn spark plugs? Or a faulty choke? Or brakes that are dragging?

Most people don't know.

That's why Shell has written a book. All about mileage. (Mileage is our business.)

The idea is to help you go as far as possible on every gallon of gasoline. That way you can keep your car in top running condition and save money.

Mileage is more than gasoline

This book—32 Secrets—tells the story.

There are facts on driving. (Did you know it takes more gasoline to idle for one minute than it does to switch off and then restart the engine?)

There are facts on air filters, tire pressure, spark plugs. (Did you know that a dirty air filter can cut your mileage by 10%?)

The information comes from Shell research laboratories, Shell dealers across Canada, the automotive industry and professional drivers.

A Shell dealer would like to give you a free copy of 32 Secrets. He'd also like to help you solve your mileage problems.

Super Shell for good mileage

Super Shell has five ingredients for good mileage.

(1) Platformate contains petroleum molecules with extra energy built into them.

(2) TCP works to keep spark plugs from misfiring.

(3) Butane helps give fast starts. (The faster you start, the less gasoline you use before you get going.)

(4) A detergent fights deposits that can build up inside the carburetor. These deposits hurt your mileage.

(5) Mixed Pentanes help your engine warm up quickly to prevent misfiring, bucking, coughing and wasted fuel.

See a Shell dealer.

(If you haven't visited Shell before, this would be a good time. The book is free. And there's bound to be a dealer nearby.)

Athletes Get Saanich Blessing

Athletes were in and travel agents and community planners were out, at Saanich council Monday night.

Council, in split decisions on all three, decided to:

- Reject a request from the Community Planning Association of Canada for a grant towards a luncheon for delegates to its national conference in Victoria next month.
- Reject a request for a contribution towards a reception for British and European travel agents visiting Victoria.
- Approve a contribution, amounting to $110, for a banquet for 20 members of Canada's Olympic track team visiting Victoria for an athletic competition later this month.

SUPPORTING YOUTH

Ald. Foster Isherwood said the approval is inconsistent with the rejections, adding that "when it comes to sports we seem to agree holus-bolus."

Ald. Alan Newberry drew the distinction that Saanich is supporting youth in the athletics request, while travel agents and community planners don't come into that category.

In other business, council:

- Decided to initiate a local improvement for storm drains, curbs, gutters, sidewalks and boulevards along McKenzie Avenue from Patricia Bay Highway to Quadra Street.
- Called a public hearing on a request for rezoning for a $1 million apartment project at the northeast corner of Richmond Road and Mayfair Drive covering 6.2 acres.
- Approved appointment of Peterson and Lester as architects for the $470,000 Gordon Head community centre and swimming pool.

Students' Arrivals Made Easy

TORONTO (CP) — Overseas university students arriving in Canada are kept from being lost and lonely by a welcoming committee called Canadian Service for Overseas Students and Trainees.

Each student arriving at Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal or Vancouver airports is met by someone who knows his name and has arranged a place for him to stay.

The service has access to university registration files. When an overseas student is accepted, it writes to him asking his arrival time.

Home Sought For Midway Alcoholics

Public misunderstanding has caused the alcoholic patient to be neglected and abused.

This statement is made by John Gough, president of the Greater Victoria Association on Alcoholism in a brief seeking provincial government support for a "half-way house" for alcoholics.

Representatives of the G.V.A.A. submitted the brief to Health Minister Ralph Loffmark last month, and will have a follow-up meeting later this month. After a discussion with the minister, the scheme was left in obeyance until a practical cost sharing formula could be worked out.

"Our plan to open a half-way house was warmly and sympathetically received," said Mr. Gough. "We had an encouraging discussion with Mr. Loffmark. He is willing to give us what assistance he can when we are able to present a feasible plan for financing the operations of the house."

The brief calls for the purchase of an older six bedroom house to accommodate nine alcoholics at a time. Staffed by a manager, a cook, and a part-time janitor, it will provide a "24-hour therapeutic melieu for the alcoholic patient."

"There is a desperate need for a fellowship house for alcoholics who need both medical and psychiatric treatment," says Mr. Gough. "Alcoholism robs a person of the ability to accept his illness. Many alcoholics need the support and protection of a residential group atmosphere before they can begin to recover."

He adds that a residential treatment centre would serve an important educational need in the community.

"It would be a focal point for members of the public who want assistance to understand alcoholism problems. It would also afford interested persons the opportunity to assist in the rehabilitation of alcoholics."

The G.V.A.A. "half-way house" proposal is supported by the Alcoholism Foundation of B.C. Reg Clarkson, supervisor of the Foundation's Victoria Branch, agrees that such a centre is needed.

"Greater Victoria has excellent facilities for out-patient psychiatric treatment. A half-way house such as the G.V.A.A. proposes would offer medical and psychiatric treatment to its patients, and for many it would serve as a bridge between institutional care and the community."

Liberals Want Office Space And Secretary

One of the candidates for the provincial Liberal leadership said Monday he will demand greater opportunity for participatory politics not only for individuals but for his party too.

Pat McGeer, Liberal Whip and leadership candidate, appeared angry because the Social Credit administration had ordered the Liberal caucus room to be used as a furniture storage area between sessions.

He said the party "is excluded from the legislative building" between sessions and he will insist on a change if he wins his party's top job.

"One of the reasons you don't see more Grits in this building between sessions is that we have no office here and we should have," he said.

Mr. McGeer said he will seek permanent office space in the legislative building and a government-paid research assistant and secretary for the party's use.

Rooms and staff are provided now for the NDP official opposition he pointed out "and that is appropriate for any party in the house if we are to do our job properly for the people we represent."

Unlike B.C., he claimed, it is standard practice in the federal commons and other legislatures to provide secretarial facilities and office space for all parties.

Woman Jailed

CALGARY (CP) — Carol Ann Spring, 26, of Vancouver, Monday was sentenced to three months after she pleaded guilty to possessing marijuana. The woman was arrested June 5 when she arrived at Calgary International Airport.

Olympic Team Only Winner In Oak Bay

It didn't quite make it, and got itself in a quandary over municipal grants to organizations in the process.

Council—the four members who were present—couldn't decide who to give grants to, or when, or why.

The first grant for $38, requested by the intermunicipal committee to finance a dinner for the visiting Canadian Olympic team at the end of the month, was approved. But only after serious argument.

Ald. G. Scott Wallace objected to Oak Bay taxpayers being asked to pay for a dinner for the team when council had only two weeks before refused to support a luncheon in Victoria for municipal officers.

HAS OWN SOURCES

The Olympic team has its own sources of financing and taxpayers here should not be asked to give them a meal, Ald. Wallace said.

Council should be consistent if it is going to refuse some grants or "there will be no end 'of peope after us for money," Ald. Wallace said.

Ald. Frances Elford, who had opposed aiding the municipal officers, replied that council's finance committee decided helping the Olympic team because its members did not pay a professional fee for membership.

Ald. Alexander Hendry added that council had given a merit award to the Oak Bay High School team winning the Reach for the Top quiz show, and given funds to a pony league baseball team to enter a World series meet in the U.S.

In another grant, for $180, again from the intermunicipal committee, Oak Bay was asked to share in the cost of sending two municipal personnel managers of the region to a manpower management conference in Montreal.

Again Ald. Wallace opposed the grant, because it was not for an Oak Bay representative. Ald. Hendry and Ald. Elford supported it.

Finally, the three agreed when they unanimously rejected a request that council contribute $85 towards a dinner for 85 visiting European travel agents.

Money Bag Found

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Eugene Sambrini, opening his gas station Sunday, found an odd-looking bag propped against one of his pumps. Inside, police said, were $2,000,000 worth of cancelled cheques en route to the Federal Reserve Bank in Los Angeles from San Francisco. The loss had not been reported.

SEPTIC TANK POETRY TO HELP REFERENDUM

Les Passmore is usually a blunt, outspoken man.

But his support for sewers has led him to a little poetry.

"Breathes there a man with septic tank
Who, gazing at his garden dank,
Has asked with voice, emotion packed
'When will our Saanich council act?'
If such there be to him relate
By voting 'yes' Sept. 28
His putrid tank, inept designed,
Will soon to limbo be consigned,
There to stay, rejected among

More Cabinet Backing Given Sewer Proposal

A second B.C. cabinet minister has written Saanich council approving of the Sept. 28 sewerage consolidation referendum.

Ray Williston, minister of lands, forests and water resources, and a resident of Saanich, said in his letter:

"Your plans and procedures have been reviewed by the responsible officers of the pollution control board and to my knowledge everything is in proper order."

He said the proposed program would lead most directly to meeting whatever quality standards are imposed at the point of effluent discharge and would be helped by the cost-sharing program for treatment plants.

ALSO INCONVENIENCED

"Certain areas of Saanich are not serviced by sewer and I happen to be one of those who is inconvenienced by this fact. I need not detail the pleasures of digging out a plugged septic tank last Christmas night when commercial services were not available.

"Your municipality has much to do before treatment of sewage is possible or practical and any delay in your program at this time would not be in the public interest."

The letter was read at the council meeting Monday night.

Earlier, Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell wrote to council expressing views which coincide with public statements from Saanich council and officials.

Mr. Campbell said sewage disposal methods are not involved in the referendum and that the bylaw is simply a consolidation of existing sewerage areas for sounder management, better administration and more understandable financing.

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark, on the other hand, has on two occasions commented that the referendum is illegal, misleading and "might lead to an appearance of subterfuge."

WILLISTON

These comments were denied by Saanich spokesmen who said the referendum is lawful and that decisions on increased discharge and possible requirement of treatment plants are a matter for the pollution control board and the provincial health department to decide.

The referendum itself, if approved, will not create any additional sewage discharge or new works. This will be undertaken later in a five-year plan when, Saanich officials have said, provincial approval will be needed for extra discharge of effluent.

Winter Work Cutback Hits Oak Bay Project

Some winter works programs in Oak Bay may be trimmed this year, Mayor Fred Hawes said Monday night.

Money budgeted for the work — mostly improvements to Windsor Road — has fallen short due to cancellation of federal grants for winter works.

Works committee only a week before had decided the cancellation wouldn't affect Oak Bay.

But, said Mayor Hawes, about $18,000 of federal money was lost with the program. Before work on Windsor Road could go ahead, the money would have to be found somewhere else.

He recommneded council delay approval of the work until the budget could be examined. Council this year could not obligate next year's council to a budget deficit, he said.

TEMPORARY LAYOFFS

The work would run only through November and December, he said. Its delay may force temporary layoffs of about eight or 10 municipal employees.

Total budget for winter programs in the municipality is about $150,000, including the expected $18,000 from winter works grants.

Part of this would have been to complete paving of Windsor from Monterey Ave. to Victoria Rd.

In other business, council approved a contract with T. Lambie and Sons for construction of a $42,915 pavilion in Windsor Park.

TRANSFER FUNDS

A final decision on financing the pavilion — $10,000 over the budgeted amount — was withheld until council decides which fund to transfer the additional money from.

The pavilion, in the planning stage for nearly a year, will have dressing rooms, showers and a heating plant for teams playing in the park.

Council also deferred a $312 grant to help get the Victoria and District Safety Council started, inviting the president to explain what the safety council proposes to do.

Ald. Frances Elford said it would organize a home and road safety program with an intermunicipal grant of $2,400.

VIENNA (Reuters) — The Czechoslovak newspaper Smer, official organ of the regional Communist party for middle Slovakia, has been banned for the third time since the Soviet-led occupation, the Yugoslav news agency Tanjug reported Monday.

Murder Trial Ordered In Van Munster Death

Two district men have been committed for trial on a non-capital murder charge involving the death of William Bruce van Munster, 24, a hotel clerk who disappeared March 14.

Magistrate William Ostler committed Frederick James Morry, 28, and Gary Hugh McWhirter, 24, after Crown prosecutor John Macintyre concluded his case in central magistrate's court Monday.

During Monday's hearing which followed two days of testimony by more than a dozen witnesses on Aug. 28 and 29, the courtroom was packed with spectators during both the morning and afternoon sessions. At times when all available seats were taken persons lined the walls at the rear entrance.

The two accused now face a judge and jury trial during the fall assize of the Supreme Court which starts Oct. 7. Morry is represented by lawyer Cecil Branson, and McWhirter is represented by Dermod Owen-Flood. It is believed counsel for the two men will ask for separate trials when they appear before the higher court.

During their court appearance Morry and McWhirter, flanked by two Saanich police officers, said nothing and outwardly appeared calm. The two men have been in custody in Saanich cells and Oakalla prison since their arrest July 26.

Bail is not normally allowed in such cases.

Oak Bay Seeks Voting Age Cut

Oak Bay Council Monday night gave full support to a resolution to lower the municipal voting ate to 19.

The resolution, introduced by Ald. Frances Elford for the annual meeting of the Union of British Columbia Municipalities in Vancouver today, would also allow 20-year-olds to run for municipal office.

Ald. Eldord said youth had shown its political responsibility during the federal election and a provincial byelection in Oak Bay last summer.

With the provincial voting age set at 19, the least that could be done for uniformity was to set the municipal voting age at the same level, she said.

Ald. Alexander Hendry agreed that youth today was "better informed than at any time" in his experience.

The resolution, late for the UBCM deadline, may not be considered. The conference has made a habit of rejecting late resolutions in the past.

Twenty-year-olds would be able to run for office due to a recent change in the Municipal Act. Candidates for council no longer must be property owners —they can run the year their name appears on the election role for the second time.

Before the Magistrate

A man who pleaded guilty Monday to possession of marijuana will be sentenced Sept. 23.

City Police Constable John Quaife said Charles Rowland of no fixed address was found in the men's washroom in Centennial Square Saturday. A search of the accused revealed a small bag containing a brown straw-like substance, the constable said.

The officer told the court the accused told him he had taken a towel from a dispensary and that the bag had fallen from it.

Lorne Hamilton, 107 Cook, was sentenced to one month in jail on a charge of being nude in a public place. An earlier court hearing was told that on July 30 Hamilton jumped out of the bushes naked in front of persons and cars proceeding along the Dallas Road waterfront. When apprehended later he told the police he had taken three "LSD caps."

Monday he told the magistrate he would like to get a job, but Magistrate William Ostler replied the accused didn't want to work and was just "a drone in the human hive."

A 19-year-old youth who pleaded guilty to stealing a car will be sentenced Sept. 23.

Randolph Gary McDougall of 802 Heywood took a 1967 convertible model automobile frm a car lt where he had been employed and was later apprehended in Duncan, court was told.

Prosecutor John Macintyre said the accused had been convicted on a similar charge in 1966 and had received a 12 to 16-month term in the Young-Offenders' Unit.

Harvey Parsons, 226 Baillie, was fined $150 on a charge of theft. Court was told earlier he stole a car Friday from Lyle Street because he was in a hurry to get downtown.

Reynold Hill of Port Renfrew was sentenced to 10 days in jail after he pleaded guilty to a charge of intoxicated driving. Court was told he was observed driving in an erratic manner on Highway 1A Saturday and showed a breathalyzer reading of .25.

Terrence Gale, 1975 Lee, pleaded guilty to common assault. Date of the offence was Aug. 13.

Ralph Gaudry, 780 Lily, was sentenced to 21 days in jail after he pleaded guilty to his second charge of impaired driving.

Court was told he hit a parked car on Admirals Road Sept. 6 and showed a breathalyzer reading of .21. He was convicted of a similar charge in 1965.

Murray Soyka, 5973 Oakwood, was fined $300 following a conviction for impaired driving. Court was told he was involved in an accident on Quadra Street July 13.

Fined for careless driving were:

Keith Edwards, 1885 Dickson, dragging on Douglas Street July 20, $35; Martin Modeste, 309 Henry, hit pole on Esquimalt Road Sept. 3, $35; Dorcas Nicholson, 2558 Bermuda, accident on Bay Street Aug. 30, $40; Ann Adams, 1345 Haultain, accident on Burdett Aug. 11, $50.

AT CAMP

LOU HUFFS OFF

By The Canadian Press

Punch Imlach and his Toronto Maple Leafs officially opened their National Hockey League training camp at Peterborough, Ont., Monday without a hitch.

But the same could not be said for Pittsburgh Penguin coach Red Sullivan. His star forward, Lou Angotti, an off-season acquisition from Philadelphia Flyers, made an unscheduled departure from the Penguins' Brantford, Ont., training base.

Club officials said Angotti, 30, was annoyed because Sullivan had assigned him to right wing for the day's workout. As a centreman, Angotti led the expansion club in scoring last season with 12 goals and 37 assists.

"If he (Angotti) thinks I'm going to chase after him, he's got a long wait," Sullivan said. "The next move is up to him."

At Peterborough, Imlach was pleased by the attitude of his 80 charges—especially since centre Mike Walton and goaltender Bruce Gamble have complied with his orders to shave their sideburns.

WON'T TELL CHANGES

In Quebec City, coach Keith Allen of Philadelphia Flyers announced he intends to make "six or seven" lineup changes, but did not elaborate.

Among the new faces expected to win a starting job with the Flyers is Simon Nolet, 26, a right winger who led the American Hockey League last winter with 44 goals and 52 assists.

St. Louis Blues, the only NHL team to set up camp in the Maritimes, Monday prepared to finish off the first segment of their preparations at St. Andrew's, N.B. They move to Ottawa Wednesday.

The Blues' coach and general manager, Scotty Bowman, was optimistic.

"We'll do better this season. We have more depth and we'll get off to a better start."

Bowman said he was especially pleased with the work of former Montreal Canadien goalie Jacques Plante. The six-time Vezina Trophy winner is ending a three-year retirement.

READY TO PLAY

"It's almost as if I had never been away," said Plante, who is nearing his 40th birthday.

Ron Schock, the former Boston Bruin who was hampered by an eye injury most of last season, and Bill Plager, picked up in a late-season trade with Minnesota North Stars, were singled out by Bowman for impressive early efforts. The addition of Plager gives St. Louis a triple brother act. Barclay and Bob Plager were with the Blues when brother Bill was acquired.

Among the 39 players in the Blues' camp are two players from the Yugoslavian national team. Forwards Albin Felc, 27, and Victor Tissler, 26, led the Yugoslavs to a 7-0 record and the B group championship at the Winter Olympics in Grenoble, France, last February.

Milt Schmidt, general manager of Boston Bruins, said in London, Ont., that Europe is an inevitable supply source for National League talent.

"There's no question we'll have to start looking pretty soon toward Europe for players. . . . They're developing rapidly over there. They really take the game seriously and you don't need a much better example than the world hockey tournament and the Olympic Games."

Schmidt and the Bruins have two Europeans attending their training camp.

PLAYED IN OLYMPICS

The other player is Eje Johansson who was player-coach at Tyringe, Sweden, last season.

Johansson said NHL teams interested in tapping the European player market had better be prepared to pay handsomely for any talent they acquire.

"I believe many young Swedish players would like to play in the National League. Even in Sweden, the NHL is tops. But for a player in Sweden to leave and play in the NHL an arrangement would have to be worked out between the team that wanted him and the one that owned him."

Alain Caron, 30, a right winger obtained in a deal with Oakland Seals, was missing Monday from Montreal Canadiens' twice-daily workouts. Caron, one of 60 players working out in Verdun, Que., was reported suffering a mild groin injury.

MAX GOES EAST

Gulls Show Up As Trim Ones

If fitness is as important as some say, then San Diego Gulls may not be too far off the championship pace in the coming Western Hockey League campaign.

Players and their poundages provided manager-coach Max McNab with a pleasant surprise when players checked in for training at Memorial Arena at the weekend.

Only three were overweight.

"And two of them" McNab said Monday before leaving for Detroit, "were far too light last year. Fred Hilts and Johnny MacMillan both could use some extra weight."

The other "heavy" is veteran defenceman Gord Sinclair.

EXHIBITION SATURDAY

Physicals and a light skate were the orders for Monday. Sterner sweat sessions were expected today.

Gulls will work out twice daily (starting at 9 a.m. and 1 p.m.) until Saturday, when they meet Victoria's junior Cougars in an exhibition game at the Arena.

The Gulls are carrying on without McNab. He left at noon Monday for the Detroit Red Wings' camp. Veteran defenceman Jack Evans, who reported in with fewer pounds than he had at the finish of last season, was left in command.

JUST LOOKING

McNab's visit to the parent National League team is "strictly look-see."

"I like the men we have in camp here," said Max, "but if we can do any better . . . I'll be happy to take them."

McNab plans to return to Victoria "in two or three days" and assume command.

Toros Clinch Title With Tomic Power

SAN DIEGO (AP) — San Diego Toros clinched the Western Conference title of the North American Soccer League with a 1-0 victory over Kansas City Spurs Monday night.

San Diego takes on Eastern Division champion Atlanta here Saturday in the first of a home-and-home, title-deciding series.

Before 6,271 fans, the game stayed a scoreless tie until the eighth minute of the second overtime period—the 113th minute of actual play—when Novak Tomic, a substitute brought off the bench for that period, booted the ball into the net.

Tomic was picked to try a penalty kick in the final minute of regulation time, but the shot stuck the crossbar.

Long Return Sparks Los Angeles Victory

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Ron Smith returned the second half kickoff 94 yards for a touchdown and Los Angeles Rams went on to beat St. Louis Cardinals 24-13 in a National Football League game Monday night.

Five minutes after Smith's jaunt, Ram quarterback Roman Gabriel capped a 62-yard march with a six-yard touchdown pass to Jack Snow to put the Rams ahead 24-6.

Ed Meador, a safety, set up the first Ram touchdown by intercepting a Hart pass and returning it 20 yards to the Cardinal 12.

Until the fourth quarter, the Cards were able to score only on two field goals by Jim Bakken.

The key play was a 13-yard pass on fourth down to flanker Bobby Joe Conrad at the Rams' 22. Two plays later Hart hit Roy Shivers in the end zone with a 17-yarder.

BASKETBALL PLAYER DIES AT PRACTICE

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — A freshman basketball player at the University of Missouri-Columbia collapsed and died of an unusual type of heart seizure while shooting baskets in a gymnasium Monday.

Dr. Richard Johnson, coroner, said an autopsy disclosed that Sanford Boyd died of an unusual seizure which sometimes hits young people for no apparent reason.

He said there was no damage to the heart and Boyd was in excellent physical condition.

Bristling Umpires To Fight Release

CLEVELAND (AP) — Al Salerno and Bill Valentine, claiming success in their efforts to organize the 20 baseball umpires of the American League, say they will fight their firing by Joe Cronin, president of the league.

Valentine, 35, bristling over the firing Monday, said: "There's no doubt that we were released from our jobs because of our organizing activities."

He said the proposed union had the support of a majority of the umpires.

League officials confirmed the firing, but denied that union activity was the cause.

"Salerno met with National League umpires Thursday night," Valentine said. "Friday, the cards were mailed to every American League umpire. Today (Monday) we were fired."

Salerno, 37, said he was shocked by the firing.

"It was my turn to work the World Series," he said. "I thought that was what he (Cronin) was calling about.

WON'T RENEW CONTRACT

"He asked how I was and about my flight out, then he told me my contract was not being renewed for 1969 . . . that I was fired."

The two umps said two telephone calls, seven minutes apart, notified Salerno that he would receive 10 days severance pay and Valentine 30 days.

They said National League umpires, who "have been organized for several years," get from $3,000 to $7,750 a year more than AL umpires and "are ahead of us in every department."

The original plan had been to set up a separate organization of AL umpires, they said, but the NL umpires invited them to join them in an organization which would be called the Major League Baseball Umpires Association.

"We had a majority before I went to Chicago," said Salerno. Valentine said signatures for the larger organization had been received from a majority of the umpires but declined to say how many had signed up.

McLain's Timing Delights

NEW YORK (AP) — Denny McLain not only surrounded himself with glory and $250,000 when he posted victory No. 30, but he also provided the entire sport of baseball with an unexpected windfall in a season of declining attendance.

The $250,000 figure was provided by McLain's personal manager, Frank Scott, who estimated that's what the 30th victory would mean to the Detroit pitcher in salary, endorsements, etc.

The instrument for the windfall was provided by the National Broadcasting Co., which each week on Saturdays televises a Game of the Week—and had the good fortune to have McLain's bid for No. 30 fall on Saturday.

WORKED OUT OF TURN

Oddly enough, as it turned out, the two times during the season that McLain worked out of order with only two days' rest, brought his scheduled shot at No. 30 to last Saturday rather than on a non-television day.

NBC estimated that televising McLain's bid to become the first 30-game winner since 1934 resulted in a 30 to 40 per cent increase in its audience for a routine Saturday game.

MORE TUNE IN

Translated into viewers, that would lift the 9,000,000 to 10,000,000 average for a Saturday into the 13,000,000.

That would mean:

—McLain made a lot of friends for baseball and kept interest in the sport high despite pennant races that were almost decided on a weekend when professional football rolled into high gear.

—McLain gave NBC a larger audience than could normally be anticipated, thereby making NBC brass and the all-important sponsors happy.

EVERYBODY SMILING

—McLain made the World Series significantly more attractive, bringing smiles to baseball executives as well as NBC executives.

"It all points up," said Carl Lindemann, vice-president of NBC Sports, "that even when we have two races in which the pennants are virtually decided that baseball can come up with significant interest; that there are always records to be set or broken."

Track Reps Add Buniak to Ranks

TORONTO (CP) — Distance runner Peter Buniak of Toronto has been added to the Canadian track and field team for the 1968 Olympics in Mexico City next month.

Buniak was the winner of the 10,000-metre race at the Canadian trials in August.

Jenny Wingerson Meldrum of Toronto also has been picked to represent Canada in the women's pentathlon. Canada will not have a representative in the men's decathlon.

Cash Clout Puts Tigers Game Away

New York Mauled as Detroit Zeroes In on Long-Awaited Title

By The Associated Press

Cash smacked a two-run single in the first inning and a three-run homer in the second as the Tigers mauled New York Yankees 9-1 Monday night, assuring themselves of no worse than a tie for the American League pennant which hasn't flown in Detroit since 1945.

Don Buford's grand slam homer and bases-empty blasts by Brooks Robinson and Boog Powell powered the second-place Orioles past Boston Red Sox 8-1 and kept Baltimore hopes of a tie alive.

Rookie Rick Renick drilled a ninth-inning homer, giving Minnesota Twins a 4-3 victory over California Angels in the only other game.

The Orioles, 10½ games off the pace, must win their remaining 10 starts while the Tigers lose their last 11 to force a pennant playoff.

The Yankees moved into third place with a 10-game winning streak before running into a buzz-saw at Detroit.

Cash's single keyed a four-run opening burst against New York starter Joe Verbanic and the Tigers rocked reliever Steve Barber for five more runs in the second, with Cash's 22nd homer the big blow.

Bengals Stretch String to Seven

The early onslaught helped southpaw John Hiller, 9-5, of Toronto breeze past the Yanks and extend Detroit's winning string to seven games. Hiller scattered eight hits and struck out seven in hurling the 10th straight complete game for the Tigers' staff.

Brooks Robinson pulled the Orioles even at Boston with a second inning homer and started the decisive fourth inning flurry with a single off loser Jim Lonborg. Elrod Hendricks' single, a walk and pitcher Tom Phoebus' infield hit broke the 1-1 tie before Buford hit the second grand slam of his career.

Powell's leadoff homer and doubles by Robinson and Mark Belanger gave Phoebus two more runs in the fifth and he brought his season mark to 15-14 with ninth inning help from Eddie Watt.

Renick's third major league homer, a leadoff shot off Sammy Ellis in the ninth, capped Minnesota's late comeback against the Angels.

Two errors by Jackie Hernandez in the fourth helped the Angels push over three unearned runs, but the Twins rallied for three in the eighth on two walks, Cesar Tovar's double, a wild pitch and Rod Carew's triple.

Cards Trying to Prove Something

St. Louis Cardinals may be building a National League dynasty, but it looks more like a dictatorship.

Not content with having run away with their second straight pennant, the Cards are about to have their say in determining the rest of the standings too.

They move into San Francisco tonight for a three-game series with the Giants, who lead third-place Cincinnati by two games after Monday's 8-4 victory over the Reds. Chicago Cubs are 3½ games behind the Giants and Atlanta Braves are five back.

Then it's on to Los Angeles for three with the Dodgers, who are battling Houston Astros and New York Mets for eighth place.

After that it's back home for two games with seventh-place Philadelphia Phillies, who are trying to catch Pittsburgh Pirates, and three with Houston Astros.

In Monday night action, Los Angeles tripped Atlanta 6-0 and Pittsburgh trounced Philadelphia 6-1.

"The way it's planned, the pitchers will go in their regular rotation for the remaining 11 games—Bob Gibson, Ray Washburn, Nelson Briles and Steve Carlton," Red Schoendienst, manager of the Cardinals, said Monday night.

WILL MEET McLAIN

That means Gibson will work every fifth day, which will bring him right up to Oct. 2 and the much-awaited confrontation with Detroit Tigers' Denny McLain in the World Series opener.

Willie McCovey drove in four runs in San Francisco's victory over Cincinnati, which prevented the Reds from moving into a virtual tie for second place.

McCovey's two-run double highlighted a five-run rally in the seventh inning that gave rookie reliever Rich Robertson his first major league victory.

Bill Singer scattered nine hits and his two-run double capped a five-run uprising in the sixth inning that broke a scoreless tie with Atlanta as the Dodgers won for the 10th time in 13 games. Jim Lefebvre singled in the first run, Len Gabrielson doubled home the second and the third scored on an error by Felix Millan.

Rookie Dock Ellis hurled a three-hitter for his first complete game and Donn Clendenon and Bill Mazeroski drove in two runs apiece as Pittsburgh whipped Philadelphia.

Singles by Gene Alley, Matty Alou, Roberto Clemente and Clendenon accounted for two runs in the first inning. Clendenon whacked his 16th homer in the fourth, Maury Wills singled a run across in the sixth and Mazeroski drilled a bases-loaded single for the final two in the ninth.

Black Salmon 'Slaughter' Deplored

COWICHAN BAY —Retired commercial fisherman and angler Alex Johnstone Monday attacked what he called the "would-be sports fishermen" who are taking black spring salmon from Cowichan Bay.

Mr. Johnstone said the fisheries department fishing boundary should be imposed no later than Sept. 10. So far no limit has been set this season.

"They're taking out salmon which are ready to spawn and most of the fishing is being done by would-be sportsmen," he said.

"They take them just to go and weigh them. There's no sport in it. It's just a slaughter."

Federal fisheries inspector Sym Robertson said Monday that "the springs are running up river and not hanging around the bay as they usually do because there is plenty of water.

"We can see no reason to put up the boundary," he said.

Mr. Robertson admitted "quite a few" black springs are being taken but said this would be the same even if the boundary was put up.

GAMES' PREVIEW SEPT. 28

WORLD-CLASS TALENT EXPECTED

One-Girl Olympic Team to Test Canada's Best in City

World class athletes should be plentiful when the "Olympic Preview" track and field meet is staged at Centennial Stadium on Sept. 28, and one of the greatest will be the entire Nationalist China Olympic team.

Chi Cheng is the Chinese team.

Talented and versatile, she will be the lone representative of her country at the Olympic Games next month in Mexico City.

The attractive Miss Cheng will compete at Centennial Stadium in the women's sprints, hurdles and long jump. She will also run a leg on the international relay team being assembled to oppose the formidable Canadian quartet.

Miss Cheng has turned in some remarkable performances this summer. In the 80-metre hurdles she has run 10.5 seconds, second only to the time posted by Vera Korsakova of the Soviet Union.

Last month she sprinted 100 metres in 11.2 seconds, which is one-tenth off the world record and the second fastest time in the world this year. Miss Cheng is also one of the few distaff long-jumpers able to leap 20 feet and she has registered the fifth best point total among the world's distaff pentathlon contestants this season.

It won't be easy for Miss Cheng in the women's sprints. Going against her will be American star Janet Macfarlane, a finalist at the 1967 Pan-American Games, and Canadian champion Irene Piotrowski of Vancouver.

Such is the quality of competition being lined up to face the Canadian Olympic track and field team that meet organizers are predicting several Canadian records and are expecting some world marks to be in danger.

Staged by the Victoria International Track and Field Association, the meet will make Victoria the only city in Canada that will see the country's Olympic track team, which will leave for Mexico Sept. 29.

"We saw a chance to get this meet in July and went after it," club executive Art Burgess said Monday. "We thought Victorians deserved a chance to see the best.

"We feel it will be a boost to track and field in Victoria and an inspiration to our young athletes. While we could have staged the meet at little expense with local opposition, we felt it would be a big help to our Canadian team to provide the best talent we could obtain."

The search for world class talent has been an extensive one and meet officials estimate it will require an attendance figure of about 2,500 to meet expenses.

Members of the organizing group have kept telephone lines humming and last weekend dispatched Ron Bowker to South Lake Tahoe, Calif., site of the U.S. Olympic trials, to seek top U.S. performers. Bowker arrived home Sunday night with high hopes that later in the week he will be able to confirm appearances by several American stars.

Telephone calls to Kingston, Jamaica, resulted in permission to deal directly with Jamaican Olympic team members residing in the U.S. and a call to Washington, D.C., produced four great runners from Trinidad-Tobago.

Most notable is Edwin Roberts, bronze medallist in the 200 metres at the Tokyo Olympics and a long-time rival of Canada's Harry Jerome. Roberts and Jerome have clashed several times with neither able to demonstrate consistent superiority and they'll have another round of their continuing duel on Sept. 28.

Another classy sprinter from Trinidad, Ronald Monseque, has dashed 100-yards in 9.3 seconds and could be shoulder-to-shoulder with Jerome and Roberts at Centennial Stadium.

Benedict Cayenne is another Trinidad Olympian and his best time of 1:48.3 for 800 metres could force Canada's famed Bill Crothers to his best time of year in order to win.

Cayenne is also a member of Trinidad's powerful 1,600-metre relay team along with Roberts, Monseque and Kent Bernard. Both Roberts and Bernard ran on the relay team that set a still-standing world record at the 1966 British Empire Games.

Bowker promises there will be other stars on hand to oppose the Canadian Olympic sqaud, which includes Victoria's Bob McLaren.

"This will be the only appearance of Olympic team prior to the Games," Burgess said, "and the degree of public support will be a factor in determining whether or not the Victoria Track and Field Association is successful in a bid to stage the national championships here next year."

Tickets for the meet will go on sale Wednesday at Memorial Arena and additional information may be obtained from Burgess (386-7511) or Bowker (388-7458).

RUSSIA FIFTH NATION TO BOYCOTT CUP EVENT

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union withdrew from European Cup soccer competition Monday in protest against a realignment of matches following the Soviet intervention in Czechoslovakia.

The Soviet Union was the fifth Communist country to pull out of the European Cup and European Cup of Cup Winners contests.

Earlier Poland, Bulgaria, Hungary and East Germany had withdrawn their teams.

The European Soccer Union had ordered a re-drawing of matches in the two competitions to avoid East-West clashes in the first rounds.

A number of Western teams were opposed to meeting teams of those countries which invaded Czechoslovakia.

Ailing Ex-Champ On Refugee Flight

(Times News Services)

Gavilan, 42, and half blind, said he had tried to leave Cuba since Fidel Castro took over in 1959 but was not permitted to do so.

"They said I had to work in the farm fields before I could leave, but I couldn't because I have muscular pains," Gavilan told reporters.

ELLIS REPLIES

Meanwhile, in New York, another flight returned Jimmy Ellis to the U.S. and brought charges of bias as the reason behind his controversial decision over former heavyweight king Floyd Patterson. Everyone in Stockholm, said Ellis, was for Patterson "and not me."

Ellis, loudly booed after Saturday's unpopular 15-round decision over Patterson, said; "I went in and fought my heart out for 15 rounds."

Wearing dark glasses to hide bruises and cuts around his eyes, he added: "I forced the fight. I carried the fight to him."

He said the punch that broke his nose was a "pretty good blow," adding the cuts around his eyes resulted from "lots of butts."

Butlin's Contracts Disputed

CALGARY (CP) — Ron Butlin, president of the Western Canada Hockey League and the Canadian Hockey Association, stated here that Mayor L. H. Lewry of Moose Jaw has been "badly and incorrectly" advised about WCHL player contracts.

Mayor Lewry disclosed earlier that he has sent letters to Saskatchewan welfare minister C. P. MacDonald and H. C. French of the Alberta labor department asking for an investigation into possible infringements of the provincial human rights acts by the WCHL.

The mayor said the player and club contracts in the league should be considered illegal under both provincial acts. He cited a clause of the contracts to the league which files with the Canadian Hockey Association the "exclusive right to conduct on its behalf all negotiations respecting professional contracts, the sale or tranfer of player rights, and the sale or transfer of the team franchise."

The mayor said he felt the "signing of such contracts could seriously jeopardize the future rights and playing careers of the younger players."

Butlin said WCHL player contracts do not have such a clause in them.

"Our contracts are open for anyone to see," Butlin said.

The WCHL was formed this spring by several teams that broke away from the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association following a junior age-limit dispute.

MOE NORMAN
. . . some improprieties

Another 'Record' For Moe

TORONTO (CP) — Moe Norman, winner of Sunday's Canadian golf tour championship in Woodbridge, Ont., has drawn a $300 fine for misconduct from the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association.

It was the first fine in the two-year history of the tour and the biggest in the history of the CPGA.

CPGA executive-director Bill Hamilton said the fine was imposed because of "some verbal improprieties during the Saskatchewan and Manitoba opens."

He said a formal complaint against Norman was put forth by an unnamed CPGA official reporting on the conduct of players during each of the nine events of this year's tour.

Broken Bubble Leading Mudder

VANCOUVER (CP) — Broken Bubble, ridden by Frank Inda, charged ahead of five other runners Monday night on a muddy track to win a $2,100 Invitational Handicap at Exhibition Park.

Broken Bubble, owned by J. A. Brown and trained by W. H. MacDonald, covered the 6½ furlongs in a slow time of 1:18 2-5.

The winner paid $4.80, $2.80 and $2.60. Fleet Abdullah was second. The eight races were run in a steady drizzle.

NEW YORK (AP)—Pro football's conversion experiment has had its run—and proved its point.

There no longer is any doubt that it is easier to kick a conversion than add on a point-after-touchdown by passing or running from the two-yard line.

And by proving that point, the experiment has opened the door to a small controversy in which players, coaches and owners are beginning to line up for or against the rule.

Those in favor of the rule feel it adds excitement to the game and is a device that will eliminate ties. Those opposed feel it adds danger to an already dangerous profession and cheapens the touchdown.

The rule was adopted by the American and National football leagues for use in inter-league exhibition games and abolished the traditional conversion kick, making it mandatory that teams either pass or run from the two-yard line to get their extra point.

ALMOST AUTOMATIC

The point was simple: The conversion kick was becoming automatic, with AFL and NFL kickers succeeding about 98 per cent of the time.

With the experiment in use during the 23 exhibition games, there were 97 extra-point attempts by running or passing, 55 successful and 42 that failed.

Of the 97 attempts, 62 were by passing and 35 by running, with the average for success just about the same. Of the passing attempts, 35 were successful, 27 failed—for 56.5 per cent. Of the running attempts, 20 were successful, 15 failed—for 57.1 per cent.

"I like it, from the standpoint it may eliminate tie games," says Houston coach Wally Lemm, whose Oilers defeated New Orleans 24-23 by running for the winning point with time running out in the fourth period.

"They're going to have to do one of two things," says San Diego quarterback John Hadl, "either take this rule out or pay us more money.

ADDS TO JOB

"If you don't make it, someone will say it was a bad call or bad pass, which is fine if it's part of the job. But if it is, I want to get paid for it."

"It increases the value of a field goal compared to a touchdown," says Baltimore coach Don Shula. "Under the present system, with the placekick almost automatic, a touchdown is worth seven points, and tops two field goals by one point. But under this rule half of your touchdowns figure to be six points and can be cancelled out by two field goals."

And that's where it all stands now. For the regular season, all experiments are off, with the AFL and NFL using their existing rules.

FIGHT RESULTS

HARVEY JOHNSON
. . . Canadian ties

Bills' Coach Earned Spurs In Canada

BUFFALO, N.Y. (CP) — If there's a Canadian look to the Buffalo Bills of the American Football League in future, don't be surprised.

Harvey Johnson, the new head coach who picked up much of his experience north of the border, rehired three assistants Monday and one of those spent a short while in the Canadian Football League.

WITH TI-CATS, ALS

Johnson, given authority to name his own assistants when elevated from director of player personnel on Sunday, was an assistant coach with Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Eastern Conference. He led Kitchener to four straight championships in the Ontario Rugby Football Union and was on the coaching staff of Montreal Alouettes of the EFC.

Johnson, 49, was promoted when club owner Ralph C. Wilson Jr., fired Joe Collier, shortly after Buffalo was trounced, 48-6, by Oakland Raiders.

Tiny Terry Scores Big As Habs Square Series

OSHAWA, Ont. — Terry Davis, once the "mighty mite" among Inter-City Lacrosse League marksmen, appears to be regaining some of his old-time stature.

He figured in nine goals Monday to guide Montreal Canadiens to a 14-8 victory over the favored Peterborough Lakers in a wild-and-wooly National Lacrosse Association playoff game here.

Davis scored four goals, set up five as Canadiens deadlocked the best-of-seven Eastern Division semifinal series 2-2. The fifth game will be played in Peterborough tonight.

SCORE IN SPURTS

Montreal took a 6-1 lead after the first period, but Lakers rallied to tie the game, 6-6, by the five-minute mark of the second period. Canadiens rebounded with five goals to take an 11-6 lead into the final period.

LATE BRAWL

Several players from both benches, and two players from the penalty box, joined in.

Five players on each team were assessed five-minute majors and game misconducts. Referees Bill Denny and Dick Petersen handed out a total of 201 minutes in penalties, 115 to the Lakers.

AUTOMATIC FINES

Thirteen players were assessed a total of $450 in automatic fines.

Michel Blanchard, Brian Ahearne and Jan Popiel of Montreal and Billy Armour and Carm Collins of Peterborough were each fined $50.

Fined $25 were Brien Thompsen and Gord Keates of Montreal, Tim O'Grady, Greg Marchand, Harris Hunter, Jim Vilneff, Cy Coombes and Jim Goolie, all of Peterborough.

All four of them.

That's what the Toyota Corona was made for. Hard driving.

With a gutsy 90 horsepower oversquare engine, the Corona is practically unburstable. You can cruise at 80 m.p.h. all day, and you'll never get an inferiority complex on those long straight super highways. And that includes uphill which is more than you can say for some imports we know.

The Corona thrives on the tough stuff, the rugged unit construction is built to take anything you or the roads or the weather throw at it. You'll probably outgrow the Corona before you outwear it.

But, the Corona isn't just guts and brawn. Hardly. Toyota didn't skimp on luxury and safety in the interest of performance. Three point safety belts, a padded dash, four way emergency flashers, two speed wipers, quad headlights, all vinyl reclining bucket seats, carpeting, a tool kit and windshield washers are just some of the extras you get on the Corona. At no extra cost.

There is one option, it's an automatic in case you're the conservative type.

Drop in to your nearest Toyota dealer and test drive the tough, gutsy Corona. Give it the gears, it'll love you for it.

Toyota Corona.

Opening of Met Recalls Feud

NEW YORK (AP) — The Metropolitan Opera opened its 84th season Monday night with an old-fashioned—you could add mildewed—opera, and memories of an old rivalry between prima donnas.

Renata Tebaldi sang the title role in Francesco Cilea's Adriana Lecouvreur. It's an opera hopelessly complicated and intrigue-filled, with broad romantic melodies like Viennese operetta songs, not too exciting and not too musical in between.

The four principal singers all sang in the opera the last time it was done at the Met, six seasons ago. Franco Corelli looked dashing and ringingly sang the part Enrico Caruso sang the first time the Met did Adriana Lecouvreur, on opening night in 1907.

Irene Dalis and Anselmo Colzani both sang well and made laudable attempts to act.

Maria Callas attended the performance—her first time inside the Met at Lincoln Centre—bringing back memories of her long, celebrated 'feud" with Tebaldi. Once, the battle lines were drawn and every opera lover was passionately convinced that either Callas or Tebaldi was the greatest soprano.

Echoes of those by-gone days were heard just before the curtain went up, when shouts of "Brava Maria" reverberated against shouts of "Brava Renata."

But Callas's voice was nearly gone the last time she sang at the Met, in 1964, and Tebaldi, though singing better than she did the last time she did Adriana Lecouvreur here, does not have the voice she once had.

Rent Control Lost

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Mayor John Wheelton cast a tie-breaking vote Monday at a city council meeting to defeat endorsement of a resolution by the city of Ottawa calling for provincial control of rents.

It was the second time in as many years that council had defeated proposed control of rents.

Canadian Will Play Star Role

LONDON CP) — John Colicos, prominent Montreal actor, will star in the controversial play The Soldiers which is to open in London in November, shortly after the Lord Chamberlain loses his powers to censor stage plays.

The play, written by West German playwright Rolf Hochuth, was rejected by Britain's National Theatre last year on the grounds that it suggested Sir Winston Churchill was involved in the wartime death of a Polish general, Wladislaw Sikorsky.

When the script was submitted to the Lord Chamberlain, who has had powers since 1824 to ban plays, so many cuts and restrictions were made that the play was abandoned.

It was put on in Toronto where Colicos performed so well in the role of Sir Winston that he was picked to play the same leading role in the London performance. The Lord Chamberlain's powers to censor plays ends Sept. 26.

Kenneth Tynan, literary agent of the National Theatre and one of the play's sponsors, said he would be "very surprised" if the Churchill family is upset by the performance.

Aside from Colicos, no casting has been decided as yet. The theatre, still to be chosen, will be in the West End.

The director will be Clifford Williams of the Royal Shakespeare Company who staged the Canadian production.

Potential 'Hurt'

VANCOUVER (CP)—The British Columbia government will reduce the recreational potential of the Boundary Bay area to a "meaningless level" with its proposed rail route to the Roberts Bank port, says Don Lanskail, chairman of the Lower Mainland Regional Planning Board. Mr. Lanskail Monday accused the government of selecting the route for purely technical reasons and ignoring the recreational value of the aea.

MACKASEY'S NEW TACTICS

More Dialogue Between Labor and Management

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey is bringing a new personal approach to the question of management-labor relations.

The one-time boxer and railway shop worker believes that more communication — or dialogue, if you like — between the two will help avoid costly strikes and lockouts.

He's working hard to revitalize the federal labor department and put some of his own labor relations ideas to work on both the business management and labor union sides of threatened industrial disputes.

STEPS IN

Mr. Mackasey demonstrated his self-styled "somewhat unorthodox tactics" last week when he stepped personally into the lengthy strike of Lakehead grain-handlers.

The 46-year-old minister summoned management and labor negotiators to Ottawa, and when more than three days of talk in the labor department's board room failed to settle the strike, Mr. Mackasey grabbed a telephone.

He went over the heads of the management representatives who were in Ottawa and talked to the presidents of the grain elevator companies.

Ever since he was a kid in the streets of Quebec City, where he learned his French, Bryce Mackasey has been a scrapper. While he still has many of the attributes of an Irishman who loves a fight, he has learned a lot about how to deal with people.

MACKASEY
. . . preventative steps

Early Thursday morning, when he announced settlement of the Lakehead strike, he went to special lengths to apologize to the management negotiating team for having gone over their heads. It's a rare thing around Ottawa to have a cabinet minister admit publicly he did something not quite right, and apologize for it.

But that's the kind of man Mr. Mackasey is, willing to listen to another man's point of view while stating his own. And that's the kind of give-and-take he believes should be more usual in management-labor relations.

He is fond, for instance, of citing the labor difficulties that have periodically blown into labor warfare on the Montreal waterfront. Members of the International Longshoremen's Association struck for 39 days in the spring of 1966, tying up shipping in the St. Lawrence River ports.

The two-year contract that ended that strike after the personal intervention of Lester B. Pearson, then the prime minister, ran until Jan. 1 this year. Most observers thought a strike was a certainty for this year, too.

SIGN AGREEMENT

But the ILA and the Canadian Shipping Federation signed a new agreement to agree this spring, binding themselves to arbitration and to no strike or lockout action before next year.

As Mr. Mackasey sees it, the difficulties on the Montreal waterfront have always arisen from an almost total lack of contact between management and the union between the periods of strike action.

Once one settlement had been reached, resentment started building up which culminated in another strike.

Mr. Mackasey is playing a personal role in trying to prevent this from happening again. He is holding periodic informal talks with union and management representatives in an effort to keep both sides informed about what the other is thinking and doing.

If there were more of such communication, he says, a lot of labor strife could be avoided.

Panel Slated To Discuss Sewage Plan

A public panel discussion on the Saanich sewerage enterprise referendum will be held Thursday.

It is being sponsored by the local branch of the Community Planning Association of Canada and will be held at 8 p.m. in First United Church, 1701 Quadra.

"I think it will clear a lot of misunderstanding of what the vote is for," said an association spokesman.

Panellists include Saanich engineer Neville Life; municipal deputy comptroller-treasurer John Bericoff; Dr. Reid Elliott of the economics department, University of Victoria; and Joe Cunliffe, of the engineering firm of Willis and Cunliffe. Moderator is John Fraser, a Vancouver lawyer.

Plight of Indian People 'Shocking and Intolerable'

REGINA (CP) — Robert Andras, federal minister without portfolio, said today that non-Indians have not recognized the "shocking and intolerable" plight of Canada's native people.

"No matter which set of statistics you look at, they tell the same story—low incomes, a low life expectancy, a high rate of infant mortality, poor living conditions, a high drop-out rate from the schools, poor employment opportunities, poor health services, a rapid increase in population and so on.

"The government has not completely fulfilled its obligations to the agreements and treaties it has made with the Indian people. It has allowed a justifiable sense of mistrust to develop," he said in a talk to Indian leaders.

The meeting was part of a program by the federal government of sounding out Indians on revisions to the Indian Act.

He also said Indian organizations should be strengthened to make their views known to government and to the public, and that Indians must participate more fully in direction of their own affairs.

"I want to see the day when you have a full place in the mainstream of Canadian society," said Mr. Andras.

Encyclical Protest Denied Advertising

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four Vancouver women claimed Monday The B.C. Catholic, official Roman Catholic publication in the province, has denied them permission to advertise a petition protesting Pope Paul's encyclical on birth control.

Mrs. Tania Riopel, Mrs. Elizabeth Boppart, Mrs. Marjorie Bryan and Mrs. Michael MacRae, said they plan instead to advertise their petition in Vancouver's two daily newspapers.

Mrs. Riopel said she and Mrs. Boppart spoke with Archbishop Martin Johnson, the senior Roman Catholic clergyman in the Vancouver diocese.

"He told us we could not place an ad in the paper, but that we could put in a letter if we agreed not to put anything in the secular press," said Mrs. Riopel.

The archbishop said later he had conferred with the two women but he declined further comment.

Mrs. Riopel said she and the other three women have formed a committee in opposition to the encyclical.

"Our position is a positive one," said Mrs. Riopel. "We are trying to be moderate. Quite a number of priests are on our side."

The petition drafted by the women says the encyclical "does not reflect accurate views of Christian love and marriage."

The encyclical, says the petition, "creates a crisis of conscience for all those Catholics who wish to respet and follow the teaching of the Pope but who also feel they must follow the dictates of their own conscience."

Navy Clears Russian Tug

A Russian tug, sighted Saturday by an unidentified Canadian fishing boat near the Queen Charlotte Islands, was investigated by Esquimalt naval authorities.

The navy reported later all was in order.

The tug had "necessary clearance" to enter the area and was performing a service for Russian fishing vessels, they said.

Widow Found Slain

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—A 74-year-old New Westminster woman was found strangled Sunday among the scattered contents of her tiny cottage.

The body of Jessica Koliba, a pensioner and widowed mother of five, was discovered by a neighbor who called to feed Mrs. Koliba's chickens and rabbits.

S. Vietnam Not Seeking UN Entry

SAIGON (Reuters) — The foreign affairs ministry said Monday South Vietnam does not intend to seek admission to the United Nations at the coming session of the world body.

The official South Vietnam press agency said the statement was aimed at denying a report—carried by the agency last week—that the country would seek a seat at the UN.

The last time South Vietnam applied for a place at the UN was in November, 1955, foreign ministry sources said.

Strapped by Provincial Law Victoria Schools Keep Strap

By DON VIPOND

The strap will stay in Greater Victoria schools.

The emotion-charged controversy over abolishing corporal punishment, meaning the strap, ended Monday night when trustees were told the matter was beyond their legal jurisdiction.

About 50 spectators crowded into the board room to hear chairman Peter Bunn regretfully rule trustee John Porteous' motion out of order.

It was Mr. Porteous who touched off the bitter running debate two months ago by calling for abolishment of the strap throughout the school district.

Since then there has been strong disagreement among trustees and public debate has raised the ire of teachers.

LEGAL ADVICE

Mr. Bunn said Monday night he had received legal advice that the Public Schools Act and Rules of the Council of Public Instruction (the cabinet) put disciplining in the hands of teachers.

The council instructions state in part:

"Every teacher shall practise such discipline as may be exercised by a kind, firm, and judicious parent in his family, avoiding corporal punishment, except when it shall appear to him to be necessary, and then a record of the offence and the punishment shall be made in a register used for the purpose and kept in the principal's office. . ."

The record is open for inspection only to the superintendent of schools or his representative, the district superintendent of schools and trustees.

Trustees passed another motion on the subject Monday which has the board on record as supporting principals and teachers "in the difficult task of practising discipline" as a "judicious parent" would.

Corporal punishment will thus continue to decrease rapidly, "hopefully to its ultimate complete disappearance," the motion said.

In the two months since the issue was first aired, trustees Bunn and Porteous have been the most vocal on the subject.

'FIT OF TEMPER'

Mr. Porteous has said children have been strapped in primary grades, "very often in a fit of temper." He has termed the strap "a relic of the middle ages."

Mr. Bunn has said he wants to know why some schools get by without strapping while others have the threat of it "hanging like the sword of Damocles in the front hall."

Both trustees have said they have had numerous calls from parents over the years alleging discipline abuses at schools.

Just how upset principals and teachers have been by the debate became apparent in a letter from John Smith, president of the 1,260-member Greater Victoria Teachers' Association, read to the board Monday night.

His fellow teachers had directed him to write trustees "expressing the concern of our membership over the unsubstantiated statements in the press relating to corporal punishment attributed to members of the board.

'NOTHING BUT HARM'

"The manner in which this subject has been dealt with has accomplished nothing but harm to the educational climate in Greater Victoria. It is most regrettable that this should have happened at a time when teachers, administration staff, trustees, PTAs, and other civic groups should be working in close co-operation to provide better education in this community.

"If we are to pursue the current trend toward more freedom—both for pupils and teachers—then a major review of disciplinary measures in this district is essential.

"Surely corporal punishment cannot be treated in isolation from the many problems with which teachers are faced in the classrooms."

Mr. Smith wrote that he had been instructed to request an immediate beginning on a continuing joint study "of the entire educational picture" in the school district.

The letter was referred to the board's education committee.

IN-CAMERA MEETINGS

Mr. Porteous said he and Mr. Bunn had been "victims of chastisement" "for shooting off our mouths," but two in-camera meetings with principals last week had failed to convince him he was wrong.

"I know for a fact this (discipline abuses) is going on in the schools."

Most teachers are not concerned with the issue, he said, because most are not involved.

He said he was sorry if the debate had created an atmosphere of distrust. But raising it had not been an impulsive act.

"Parents have approached me many times."

Mr. Bunn said he had taken no pleasure in making the ruling he had to on the motion.

"Basically, I am opposed to the use of corporal punishment in our schools."

CRIMINAL CODE

He quoted the Criminal Code to illustrate "it's quite legal to bash kids around."

The code provision:

"It is lawful for every parent or person in place of a parent, schoolmaster or master, to use force by way of correction towards any child, pupil or apprentice under his care, providing such force is reasonable under the circumstances."

In a prepared statement, he said: "How much respect does a little child have for the person who hits him? Fear, yes; respect, no.

"Does a young lady of 14 or 15 respect the man who hits her for breaking a rigid school rule? No respect here, only resentment.

"Does hitting a child prove anything?

'ADMISSION OF FAILURE'

"To me, it proves but one thing, the person doing the hitting has already lost his case. It is an admission of failure."

The chairman said that during five hours of discussion with principals, the board heard that retention of the strap is required by many.

"Yet some schools never use the strap and others quite frequently. Why is there this difference?"

Principals and teachers in some places and on some occasions are working in situations far short of ideal, and great effort is being made to improve conditions, he added.

He said he agreed with the teachers' association that corporal punishment could not be considered as a separate issue.

Trustee Dr. Carron Jameson said the board deserved some condemnation when it erred "by trying to make a decision on high before discussions with teaching staff."

"We're right back where we were before," said trustee Ted Wood. Strapping is unnecessary, legislation should be changed and school boards across B.C. should join forces to do battle.

HIGH SALARIES

Trustee Dr. Victor Rogers said he was amazed at the amount of emotion the subject could generate.

Change the words from corporal punishment to "strapping on the hands" and the drama is gone, he suggested.

The school board employs teachers, pays them high salaries and should trust them to use sound judgment. He said he had never found any evidence strapping does either physical or psychological harm.

"But," he added, "we have got to accept that teachers are human. Now and again they will make mistakes, be exasperated, perhaps use the strap when they would not normally.

"So would we all, faced with the same situation."

What are the alternatives? he asked.

It would be "rather silly" and "absurd" to bring in a bevy of psychology counsellors to replace the strap.

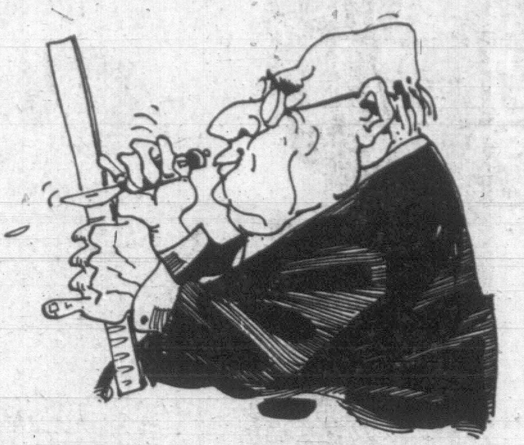
He said he was against corporal punishment in the same way he was opposed to boxing. But the issue had been magnified out of all proportion "and almost made us the laughing stock of the whole district."

The closed meetings with the principals had shown most of them were opposed to corporal punishment, said trustee Les Kariaganis.

And, added trustee Cecil Wyatt, a study showed strapping incidents had dropped by about 30 per cent last year.



" . . . like a kind, firm and judicious parent . . . "

REBEL STUDENT MAY BE DEAF

Dr. Malcolm Graham was among a crowd of spectators on hand to hear trustees debate discipline measures in the schools.

An ear specialist, Dr. Graham detailed two cases, "not in any way to be critical but to really hope we can all get together on this."

One 15-year-old boy already committed to Brannen Lake school for boys was in court there when a medical exam revealed deficiencies in both hearing and sight as well as mental problems.

Surgery was able to restore his hearing, said the doctor.

In the second case, a 10-year-old boy with a two-year record of behavioral problems was found to have a hearing problem which was 50 per cent correctable.

The boy is now in school, doing well with a hearing aid.

Studies suggest between 2 and 5 per cent of pupils in grades 1 to 6 have measurable hearing deficiencies, said Dr. Graham.

Transport Of Food Scored

Island Situation 'Critical' For Perishables Going Bad

By JIM HUME

Closer inspection of meat and perishable foods in transit will be asked of the provincial government.

The British Columbia Associated Boards of Health were told today that methods of transporting meat and other perishables on to northern Vancouver Island points was "appalling."

The meeting is being held in Vancouver, preceding the annual conference of the Union of B.C. Municipalities.

Delegates attending the annual conference of the ABH were first asked to endorse a resolution calling for an extension of meat inspection areas to all settled portions of the province. At present, these meat inspection areas exist only in the relatively heavily populated zones.

A Vancouver delegate objected to the resolution, saying that he felt inspection was only required at slaughterhouses.

His comment touched off an angry charge from Jack Lemmer, Port Alice, that people in the cities showed "an appalling ignorance of conditions existing in upper Island communities.

ROTTEN MEAT

"During the month of July in excess of 1,000 pounds of meat was condemned on arrival at Rumble Beach and Port Hardy. The meat had deteriorated so badly during transit that it just had to be thrown away."

Mr. Lemmer listed the condemned meat ranging from hindquarters of veal to pork loins and chicken breasts.

He said it was not sufficient to just inspect meat when it was at the slaughter house.

"I have never heard anything quite so ridiculous as the statement made by the Vancouvre delegate," Mr. Lemmer said.

'EXTREMELY SERIOUS'

The delegates finally approved a resolution calling on the provincial government to extend safeguards and inspection both at the slaughter house and at the in-transit level.

An earlier resolution concerning the danger of contamination of food stuffs by pesticides was also approved by the convention.

The resolution called for stricter enforcement of existing regulations which make it unlawful for pesticides or other dangerous substances to be transported in vehicles which are also used to carry food stuffs.

DRUG BENEFITS

Other resolutions approved this morning included a call for the provincial government to extend drug benefits under the medicare plan to all persons receiving a subsidy towards the premium costs of their medical insurance.

It was pointed out that while many people have up to 90 per cent of their doctors bills paid by the government, they are still unable to afford drugs prescribed.

Delegates also called on the provincial government to provide, without charge, measles vaccine to health departments and physicians in B.C. and introduce it into the regular immunization program as soon as possible.

At present, parents pay the full cost for measles vaccine.

No Housing Crisis, Only Bottlenecks, Says Campbell

By JOHN MIKA

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell Monday agreed with a private submission that there is no national housing crisis but he added there were several bottlenecks which need clearing.

Mr. Campbell was commenting on a brief presented to the opening session in Ottawa of Transport Minister Paul Hellyer's housing task force study.

Mortgate Insurance Company of Canada said the housing situation could not be called a crisis and Mr. Campbell told reporters here that the word is much too strong to describe the situation.

But he did say a number of specific difficulties must be isolated and resolved, particularly in the field of housing low-income families and meeting the needs of residents in large cities.

"I don't think the housing industry has done a very good background research job and I don't think the municipalities have helped by establishing a great many different housing standards and a great many different zoning laws," he added.

Mr. Campbell said a concerted effort is needed to provide a steady flow of mortgage funds into the housing sector.

MARKET

A more consistent market, without the swings in demand caused by loose and tight-money policies, would enable more manufacturers to invest capital in plants to produce prefabricated units which are especially suited for meeting the financial limits of low-income families," he said.

Mr. Campbell also released copies of an eight-page pamphlet on housing which his department will distribute at the Union of B.C. Municipalities convention in Vancouver this week to acquaint civic leaders with the various provincial and federal programs available to them in meeting housing needs of their communities.

ASSISTANCE

In a message at the start of the pamphlet, Mr. Campbell said many senior government programs for assisting financing of public housing "notably co-operative housing," could be used to far greater advantage than they have been.

"Not only private building companies and non-profit organizations have shown reluctance to become involved in the provision of housing, particularly low-cost housing.

"Municipalities, with few exceptions, have also shown reluctance, though they can obtain some forms of housing, like public housing, at no cost to themselves," his message said.

But, his message added, not everything can be undertaken by various government levels.

"Private enterprise has a responsibility too. Architects and builders have a responsibility to devise better techniques, better forms of development for housing."

Beaver Lake Motel Scheme Near Approval

Council gave first three readings to a sewage agreement authorization bylaw with Royal Oak Hotel over its sewage treatment system.

Municipal planner Tom Loney said his department has a development plan which shows four buildings located on the 63-acre property.

One is marked future development and the other three are labelled 16 suites each, or a total of 48. The buildings are two storeys with individual entrances to each unit.

He described it as "good-sized" development.

Zoning approval, for hotel-motel use including high-rise to 12 storeys, was granted by Saanich council in December, 1962, after a public hearing at which there was no opposition.

Mr. Loney said that in all likelihood, more information will be needed before a development permit is issued. The plan had been held in abeyance pending sewage considerations.

HIGHWAY ACCESS

He also said Saanich will talk to the provincial highways department about access from Patricia Bay Highway.

A pollution control board permit was issued for an oxidization ditch and irrigation sewage disposal system in January, 1965.

The sewage would be stored in winter and irrigated on 12 acres between May and August. The permit describes, in technical terms, the characteristics of the effluent.

Maximum discharge of sewage in a 12-hour period is 21,450 gallons and average discharge over 24 hours is the same.

One of the conditions of Saanich zoning approval was that sewage disposal be on the same parcel of land as the hotel-motel. In 1965, the Isherwood family, which owns the property, asked for removal of this condition and council agreed pending an agreement on regulation, control and operation of sewage disposal.

ISHERWOOD ABSTAINS

Ald. Foster Isherwood, who abstained from voting at council Monday night, said later Saanich municipality is involved in inspection and regulation, but not operation, and the metropolitan health board is involved in inspection of sewage disposal.

The bylaw approved (except for final reading) by council authorizes signing of the agreement. When this is done, council can then pass the amendment to the zoning bylaw removing the restriction that disposal be on the same parcel of land as the hotel-motel buildings.

In response to one question, Ald. Isherwood said the project and its disposal system have "nothing to do" with the municipal sewerage enterprise proposal since the land is miles from the boundary for extension of sanitary sewers.

Goat-Killing Cougar Shot At Metchosin

Gerry Ridley, 2973 Pickford, Colwood, armed with a .30-.30 rifle, killed the animal after his cougar hound chased it up a tree.

Mr. Ridley was called by Konrad Feldmann who saw the cougar dragging off a milk goat it had killed on Mr. Feldmann's three-acre farm at 4768 William Head Road, Metchosin.

Hunters in the area reported something had been scaring deer out of heavy bush in the area for the past week.

A number of cougar sightings have been reported near Metchosin, but there is no indication whether the six-foot animal Mr. Ridley killed was one of several.

Mrs. Feldmann said her children had been playing in the vicinity of Sherwood Creek where the animal appeared, but had seen no sign of it previously.

Rain Clouds Were Kind To Victoria

Rain that stopped air traffic and flooded roads and basements in much of the province late Monday was comparitively light in Victoria.

While 4.26 inches fell at Tofino and 1.52 at Vancouver, the highest mark in the capital was .62 on Gonzales Hill.

These were all below the total at the B.C. Hydro power station near Jordan River where 4.40 inches fell Monday and 3.78 the day before.

Seven Air Canada flights between Vancouver and Victoria were cancelled late Monday and early today because of rain and fog.

In North Vancouver, one resident reported six feet of water in his basement and West Vancouver police said they received about 100 flooded basement calls.

The sky was expected to break up this afternoon and Wednesday should be "mainly sunny."

"That's kind of stretching a point," he added. "It's not the kind of mainly sunny you get in July."

School Punishments Kept Top Secret

How often is the strap used in Greater Victoria schools?

That's "classified" information, assistant district superintendent A. J. Longmore said in an interview following Monday night's school board meeting.

It would give no indication, for example, of how much counselling went on before the strap was resorted to in any particular case.

Or of other methods of disciplining tried before the strap. Or attempts with parents to correct the problem first. Or the nature of the offence which led to the strap.

He did say that instances of strapping had declined about 30 per cent last year, despite increasing school enrolments.

Legislation on the rules of school disciplining calls for keeping a record of strapping offences, including reasons, but that record is for the eyes of senior educators and trustees only.

"The Act says the school is an agent of society and parents are having the school do a job that once was the role of just the parent," said Mr. Longmore.

But great strides have been made in the last five years on individual instruction for children, he added. If progress is as rapid in the next five years teachers will be in a much better position to meet the needs of pupils, including coping with their shortcomings.

Russia Leads Canada In Forest Cultivation

Russia's forest management is further advanced than Canada's, deputy forest minister F. S. McKinnon said Monday in an interview.

McKINNON
. . . crops of trees

He said he was particularly struck by the fact that old growth stands, as found in this province, existed only in parts of Siberia while everywhere else trees were being grown as crops.

Other aspects which caught his eye were a tight system of plant quarantine and post-quarantine fumigation as automatic treatment when exotic plants were traded among member republics of the U.S.S.R.

He also said all forestry graduates are recalled to their institutes every five years for refresher courses and "this is something which we in Canada should look at if we want to stay competitive."

Part of McKenzie Ave. Sinks But Engineers Not Worried

The trouble came in a stretch up to 20 feet wide and 100 feet long on the Simon Road section of McKenzie just west of Blenkinsop. The road dipped about 1½ feet but steps have been taken to grade it out.

Assistant municipal engineer, John Cowlin, said today crews earlier removed 11 feet of soft peat bog from top of soft clay.

Consulting engineers hired to make recommendations said that when peat bog is taken out and sand-gravel-rock is put in as fill, it is "considerably" heavier than the peat.

This resulted in settling, and Saanich decided on "surcharging" — building the road up to grade and putting down another load, of up to five feet, to compress it.

"Before we got the five feet on we had a failure on the north side," said Mr. Cowlin. "The side and part of the road sank about 1½ feet."

He said this section of McKenzie is unpaved and Saanich got what it wanted — settlement. He described the partial sinking as "nothing drastic."

Angered Bike Smasher Fined $35

Court was told the child was riding a two-wheel bike on Head Street Aug. 25 when he ran into the back of a parked car. He was then cautioned by the accused but later while riding the bicycle ran down Morrissey's three-year-old child, who required hospital treatment.

Prosecutor Cory Stolte said the accused then took an axe and smashed the spokes of the bike and told the child to get his parents to come for it. He reportedly told the mother of the child he felt justified in smashing the bike but today told Magistrate William Ostler he was angry at the time of the incident.

Morrissey told the court he had twice sent notes to the mother asking if she wanted the bike repaired but she had told him no.

At this point the mother stood up in the courtroom gallery, asked if she could speak and said that at the time of the incident Morrissey had refused to pay any damage.

The magistrate made no order regarding damages saying that claims would have to be made in the civil courts.

New Office Block For City Centre To Cost $2 Million

A seven-story office block on the site of the old Woodward's building announced Monday will cost about $2,000,000.

Initial cost was reported to be about $1,400,000, based on the amount of the building permit taken out at city hall. Sources indicate additional features will increase the final figure.

Negotiations for major tenants of the block are still under way with Turnkey Developments of Vancouver, and will not be announced for at least a week, the company said today.

The company added that Turnkey Developments itself was not the developer of the Montreal CIL building as reported earlier — the company was formed later by persons connected with its construction.

Ask The Times

Q. Is it not a fact that anyone who has paid federal income tax may vote in a federal election?—E.F.W.

A. A person may vote in a federal election if he or she is 21 years old on or before polling day, is a Canadian citizen or British subject, has resided in Canada for the 12 months immediately preceeding polling day and, at a byelection only, is resident in the electoral district until polling day at the byelection. In addition there are disqualifications, for example, the chief electoral officer, assistant chief electoral officer, returning officers during tenure of office, prisoners or persons suffering from mental disease.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps on antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

City Schools To Hold More Kindergartens

With school openings squared away, more room for kindergartens has been found in the Greater Victoria schools.

Full-time kindergartens will increase from four to eight effective Oct. 1, assistant district superintendent A. J. Longmore told trustees Monday night.

The change means one-third of the school district's kindergartens will operate a full program—2½ hours a day. Others hold classes in shifts.

"It seems kindergartens are going into areas of the city where parents can afford to send their children to private kindergartens," said trustee John Porteous.

He cited James Bay as a district with a critical shortage and said getting a kindergarten there should have top priority.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Penny Confesses Latest Weakness

By PENNY SAVER

I'll admit it — I've given in to the lure of leather. Whenever anyone says "leather" my ears perk up and my eyes begin to shine. Fur scarcely interests me any more, unless I can reach inside and feel the leather to which it is attached. I have learned a lot about how a tiny mink turns into a big coat this way. Another idiosyncracy I have acquired that earns me some funny looks in stores is checking handbags to see if they are real leather. In the handbag field vinyl has been around so long that most women don't give it a thought. My prying around for the "genuine leather" mark seems quite out of place. Finally I found one leather item that fitted into my budget without a strain. It is a small item I know, but an interesting one and I hope my readers will be as pleased with my find as I am.

My find is leather flowers, representing the floral emblems of each province in Canada. Flowers and leather are not so dissimilar as they sound. The artist has carefully shaped each leaf and petal, using the rigidity and stretchability of leather to make each as exact as possible. The leather is tinted the greens, reds, whites, yellows or purples found in the flower. The result is an attractive three-dimensional brooch or earring set. As well as the provincial flowers, these hand-crafted leather items include the Canadian maple leaf (at its best in autumnal colors), seagulls and Canada geese. The average price is $2.35 with slight variation for smaller or more complicated pieces. The finished piece is boxed and makes a wonderful, Canadian-made gift. Somewhat special among this leather jewelry is a necklace for $4.15. Available with British Columbia's dogwood only, this necklace features four flowers on a fine gold chain.

Tourist Trapped by Leather Look

There must be many women like myself who love leather this year, because while I was buying myself a brooch I heard a tourist exclaiming over a photo book with a sueded leather cover. "This is just the book to hold our snaps of Victoria," she exclaimed to her husband while she urged him to pay the $2 the book costs. The suede cover is a pale to medium beige shade with an Indian design in black on the cover. A golden vinyl "string" tied through gold-colored grommets holds in the heavy black-paper pages.

Also available in this suede is a handy zippered change-purse for $1.19 and a pocket address book for $2.50. All the items bear the Indian designs. I tried to identify each one, and managed to get as far as the salmon and the killer whale before I was stumped. One design that I found particularly confusing showed an animal with both front and hind legs, wings, a toothy snout that corkscrewed at the end and a curling tail. I wonder what sort of beast it could represent!

One of my nieces is at university this year so I decided to give her a touch of leather along with a more prosaic birthday gift. My gift was a particular book she had been wanting and I slipped a hand-made leather bookmark inside. These bookmarks are $1. They consist of a long strip of leather, tapered toward the top and finished in two points at the bottom. "Victoria" is embossed on each in gold. At the top of the book-mark is either a maple leaf, a dogwood flower or a Canada goose carefully crafted in leather.

Please call 382-3131 if you would like to know where these items may be found.

Bursaries Awarded To Student Nurses

Regent Mrs. William Blair reported the presentation of the "Ida Mellor" bursary of $100 to Miss April Irene MacKenzie, award for proficiency in bedside nursing for a second-year student, when the Florence Nightingale Chapter, IODE, met recently in the Fifth Street home of Mrs. W. R. Roskelley.

Miss Maureen Joanne Doersam, winner of an award for the highest average obtained in the first year, was presented with the Harold Menzies Memorial Bursary, also for $100, and the silver bowl. Both these awards were presented at the 66th annual commencement exercises of St. Joseph's Hospital's School of Nursing.

Another Harold Menzies Memorial Bursary and silver bowl was presented to Miss Joyce Darlene Kulachkosky, for proficiency academically and medical placements in her first year. This award was presented on behalf of the chapter by Miss Elizabeth Moore, assistant director of nursing at the Royal Jubilee Hospital's School of Nursing, at the Bar Pin Tea held recently in the nurses' residence.

A report was also given on the $100 given to the Municipal Chapter's project in support of the George R. Pearks Clinic for Handicapped Children.

Reports were given by Mrs. J. Hamilton, treasurer; Mrs. M. McAllister, education secretary, and Mrs. O. Minnis, services at home and abroad secretary.

The Municipal Bursary Educational Tea will be held Saturday, October 5 at 2 p.m. in the Students' Union Building, University of Victoria.

A municipal workshop will take place at 10 a.m., Saturday, October 19 at the Art Gallery.

Acting as delegate to the provincial semi-annual meeting to be held in Vernon will be first vice-regent Mrs. G. C. Baker.

After the general meeting, Mrs. V. H. V. Shepperd, municipal regent gave a report on the national meeting in Edmonton.

The next meeting of the chapter will be held at the home of Mrs. G. C. Baker, Thursday, October 10.

Balloon Helps Finish Bonnet

By MAY E. MacLEAN

Dear May — I have just finished knitting a baby's outfit, and I had to wash the bonnet as the wool became soiled while knitting. My problem is, the bonnet needs pressing into shape, but being so small I hesitate, I might make it worse. Do you have any suggestions?

Mrs. G. E., St. Catherines, Ontario.

Mac Lean

Dear Mrs. G.E. — I know how you feel — a little helpless when the bonnets are so small and especially if they are complete finished.

However, I do have a tip that I can pass on to you. Try using a small balloon, placing it inside the bonnet or hat, and leaving it until completely dry. You will find it will be a perfect shape without any need for pressing.

Dear May — I have been trying to find a pattern for a man's knitted scarf in rib of some sort. All I have found so far, are mostly in seed stitch and basket weave stitch and looking like the commercial cashmere kind, for which my husband has no liking.

He has a very old machine-knit scarf, soft and ribbed, so that it will crush into any shape. I find it impossible to replace. I do hope you have a similar pattern on hand.

Mrs. M. D., Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Dear Mrs. M.D. — You did not say the weight of wool that you wished to make the scarf. The machine-knits are usually in a much finer weight than hand knitting wools.

As you describe your husband's old and favourite scarf, I would imagine you would need to purchase the finest and softest weight of wool you can — a 2-ply wool would be ideal. You would also need to work it on a fine needle, about a No. 10.

It would be relatively simple for you to judge the number of stitches to cast on, especially as you have the old scarf as a guide for the width. Work in a simple knit-one, purl-one ribbing, always slipping the first stitch of every row for a neat firm edge.

Fashion's great new "jumbo quick knits" for you to knit "at the drop of a hat." Made from machine-washable and machine-dryable yarns, these hats are ideal for teen-agers to both knit and wear. Why, any one of them can be made in an evening! Simple, quick and fun to make!

To order Leaflet No. 1002, send 35c in coin or money order (no personal cheques or stamps please) together with a stamped (5c) self-addressed long envelope to:— May E. Mac Lean, "Knit & Chat," in care of Victoria Daily Times. Please be sure to state pattern number when ordering.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Soft Soap May Get Him Into Tub

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband accuses me of having affairs with other men, but I swear I've never let another man touch me. He says he is sure he is right because I am cold as ice with him.

Abby, if he would only shave and take a bath maybe that would help some, but he goes to bed in the same dirty undershirt he's worked in all day. (He does construction work.)

He shaves maybe every third or fourth day, and he seldom uses a toothbrush. The sight and smell of him kills all my desire to even kiss him. I am only 32. Is my reaction normal, or is there something wrong with me?

COLD IN HUNTSVILLE

DEAR COLD: You are normal, but there could be something wrong with your husband. The husband-wife relationship is probably the most intimate of all human relationships, and in order for it to provide the ultimate in marital relations, cleanliness is indeed next to godliness.

Tell him, Lady, tell him! But tell him out of love, not anger. A little soft soap sometimes goes a long way.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "MORTICIAN'S SON" interested me because it sounded like my husband and me before we were married. I liked him a lot, but I didn't want to be a funeral director's wife either, so I was all for calling it quits before it got too serious.

Well, my husband-to-be decided that being a mortician wasn't as important to him as I was, so he went into another line and we were married. We've been happily married for 18 years now, and neither one of us has any regrets.

That was real cute the way you told that mortician's son that if his girl didn't "dig" his profession he should "bury" the romance, but I hope you print this to show another point of view.

"HAPPY CHOICE"

DEAR HAPPY: Regardless of the choice in the beginning, we all end up with the funeral director in the end.

DEAR ABBY: "IN A QUANDARY" has set me to thinking. I am not asking you to betray a confidence, Abby, but that letter sounded like it could have been written by the wife of the man I am going with. Was her last initial "M"? This is very important as I would like to find out whether this man is lying to me or not. Thank you.

HIS GIRL FRIEND

DEAR GIRL FRIEND: Sorry, I can't give you any information about the identity of "IN A QUANDARY." But here's a clue: A married man who is "going with" another woman is obviously lying to his wife. And a man who would lie to his wife would probably lie to his girl friend,

DEAR ABBY: I am expecting a baby within the next two weeks. My husband has agreed to take me to the hospital and stay with me for six hours. No more. He says if the baby hasn't come by that time, he goes.

Abby, this is our first child, and I'd feel so much better knowing that my husband would be with me until the very end, but I can't get him to change his mind.

What is wrong with a man who would make a decision like that?

EXPECTING

DEAR EXPECTING: He's selfish. And a little sadistic.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

I recently had an interesting talk with Ruth Horan, a vivacious and attractive blonde, who is national vice-chairman of the Women's Judo Committee of the United States and chief instructor for the Y.W.C.A. in New York City.

Lowman

One of the pioneers in adapting Judo for women, Mrs. Horan is herself an excellent performer of Judo. In discussing her observations of the benefits derived from Judo by many of her 10,000 past students, it became clear that the physical reward resulting from participation in sport Judo, such as the development of grace, poise, limberness, co-ordination, balance, better circulation, and loss or redistribution of unbecoming pounds are not the only ones. There also are important additional benefits to students of Judo.

SOCIAL BENEFITS

First, there are the social benefits. Judo is a "Gentle Art" of self defence which requires not only the learning of special techniques designed to meet an opponent's force with maximum efficiency and minimum effort, but which also involves instruction on how to relate to co-players so that mutual welfare and benefit is enjoyed by all players. Members of the same Judo club develop relationships based on courtesy and trust.

There are also psychological benefits derived from the study of Judo. Mrs. Horan says that many of her students have commented that their own personal troubles seem to melt away when they come to their Judo classes. No doubt this is partly the result of being required to focus one's concentration on something other than oneself, as well as the development of a continuing interest in an activity which has no immediate bearing on one's home life or business activities.

GOOD DEFENCE

One of the most frequently cited benefits of Judo is that its participants acquire the ability to deal with intentionally harmful assaults which they might experience outside the sport situation. It is of particular advantage to a woman who would not be able to directly resist a stronger male assailant. Regardless of weight or strength, the Judo player is taught to use his own balance and leverage to throw an opponent off balance.

Mrs. Horan believes that this is one of the more important benefits which Judo offers women. She instructs her own students how to handle the most typical types of assault, such as being grabbed by the wrist by an aspiring purse thief. She has presented many of the techniques of self-defence in her book, "Judo For Women: A Manual for Self-Defence," published in 1965.

One of the first things a Judo player learns is to fall without discomfort to himself. One is taught to fall on the side of the body so that there can be no injury to the spinal column. One is also taught to roll, as much like a ball as possible. One of the most important techniques is learning to slap the arm on the Judo mat as one falls, the slapping arm acting as a shock absorber. None of Mrs. Horan's many students has ever suffered pain or injury in learning these techniques but only marvel at how simple it is.

EXPERIENCE HELPED

One of Mrs. Horan's students, an older woman, experienced confirmation of the effectiveness of the fall technique. It was winter. She was walking down an icy pavement, slipped and had a hard fall which she automatically took Judo style. Pedestrians who rushed to aid her looked on in disbelief as she jubilantly declared, "It works! It works!," got up, brushed herself off, and went on her way.

Judo is a sport which not only offers the rewards of continuous exercise, general physical tone and grace, and the perfection of an art, but also offers side-benefits which make it an unusual and more generally beneficial sport.

New interests and activities outside the home can aid a woman in staying young and being happy. Suggestions for finding happiness in your life can be found in "Individual Happiness," Josephine Lowman's free leaflet, which can be yours if you send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

Peace River Pioneer Recalls Early Days

By PAT DUFOUR

Very few British Columbians are unaware of the Peace River district, thanks to the building of the Peace River Dam, and the emphasis and publicity given that area by the provincial government. Very few British Columbians, however, realize that British Columbia's portion of the Peace River area is a paltry third, with the main section of the district being located in Alberta.

One exception to the last category is Mrs. William Stewart. She first saw the Peace River district as a bride in 1913. She recalls, "I felt that we were saying goodbye to civilization once we left Edmonton. Travel in the Peace River district was no sinecure in those days. You travelled by dog teams, sleds and boats.

"We had to portage for 16 days because of the rapids. To make the portage at least eight women and a child were literally stuffed into a horse-drawn wagon called a Democrat. I was sore and stiff for days!"

MARRIED IN SCOTLAND

At the time that the Stewarts headed for the Peace River area, rumors were rife that the railroad would be going through the settlement of Grouard when it was built. Mr. Stewart was sent to start a branch for the Royal Bank of Canada. Before heading west, he'd returned to Scotland to marry.

Grouard was named for the Roman Catholic bishop who devoted 60 years of service to that area. Unexpectedly, the railroad changed its plans, deciding to build a station at Peace River Crossing (the old name for Peace River) instead of Grouard. So the next spring found the Stewarts heading for Peace River.

Susan Stewart was one of the first white women to settle in the Peace River area. In her picture album she has a snapshot taken outside St. James Church in 1915. The occasion was the wedding of William McIvor, and the whole population (barely more than a score) were there for the event.

FEELING OF ISOLATION

The spring of 1914 saw an influx of settlers and would-be business men. But it took years before the Peace River district could feel anything but isolated.

"I remember when Queen Victoria died. It was three months after she was buried before the local Royal Canadian Mounted Police post heard about it. Then they flew the flag at half-mast. I remember it well. The fellow who lowered the flag was a great friend of ours."

Mrs. Stewart has nothing but admiration for the Indians and half-breeds that made up most of the Peace River population area in the early days. She tells of some of them.

"Old Alec Kennedy ran a small farm. He was part Indian. Because of his knowledge he was asked to head a team of voyageurs on the river Nile in 1884 for the advance that helped relieve General Gordon at Khartoum.

"One of my first visitors was Alexander Mackenzie. His mother was an Indian but his father had sent him to Scotland to receive his education at Inverness. When he came to call he was hungry to meet someone from Scotland. He wrote the finest copperplate I've ever seen."

Susan Stewart's eyes shine when she speaks of the Bourassa family. "Louis Bourassa carried mail for 30 years from Peace River Crossing to Fort Vermilion, a distance of 300 miles. He had to use dog team, sleigh and river boat and, never once was the mail late. He received an OBE from King George V."

Susan Stewart is more reluctant to tell of her own award. She was presented with a King George VI Coronation Medal. Just a few of her achievements would explain why. She served as provincial president for the Alberta Women's Institute for four years, headed her district's hospital and education boards, and went to Ottawa for a short while in 1943 to act as German translator with the federal government.

She had more than the normal problems to face when, as a young bride, she set up housekeeping.

SHOPPED IN WINNIPEG

"I bought my furniture on the way out, shopping at Eaton's in Winnipeg. They had to ship it by boat, and I have nothing but admiration for their packing. Not a thing was broken.

"Of course, there were frustrations. Each time a boat arrived it became a game, trying to guess which article would be delivered this time. One shipment, it was the legs of my dining room table. The top arrived six weeks later!"

As the white man moved into the area, the social life began to swing. Debating and music groups, and even hospital balls, became the order of the day. The area also had its own version of hippies.

"We had our remittance men, naturally. One of them was quite a hippie. He persuaded his father to send out enough lumber to make a hardwood parquet floor so that he could hold dances. I understand that the floor is still being used at his old homestead."

'CLOSED FOR REPAIRS'

Mrs. Stewart chuckles as she tells of another couple who became two of the area's characters. "Mr. and Mrs. Nagle used to run the finest restaurant in town. When they both went on a drunk they'd close the place and hang up a sign which said 'Closed for Repairs'!"

The Stewarts lived in the Peace River area from 1913 until 1947 and Mrs. Stewart's memories are a wealth of pioneering history. She'll be sharing them when she acts as guest speaker for the University Women's Club this Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the new Provincial Museum. The gathering will take the form of a meeting and reception, designed to celebrate the group's 60th anniversary.

What better way can there be to celebrate history, than by the reliving of it?

Mr. and Mrs. William Stewart lived in the Peace River area for 34 years. Although they left in 1947, Mrs. Stewart still has strong ties that draw her back. Since her husband's death in 1951 she has made seven visits to the area she called home for so long. (Bill Halkett Photo)

Gives Luncheon

Members of the Women's Auxiliary to the Maritime Museum were hosted at a recent luncheon given by the group's president, Mrs. B. P. Allard, in her home at the Viktor Apartment. Among those invited were Mrs. A. D. Turnbull, Mrs. B. L. Brown, Mrs. G. M. Aitkens, Mrs. F. M. Ethridge, Mrs. H. I. MacKenzie, Mrs. W. Rae, Mrs. J. W. D. Symons, Miss N. K. Wyles, Mrs. D. J. During the luncheon plans were discussed for a wine and cheese party, to be held at the Maritime Museum on Oct. 23.

From Ontario

Major and Mrs. E. A. Wiens and family have come from Belleville, Ont., to make their home in Victoria. After visiting Mrs. Wiens' parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Powell of Monterey Avenue, they are now making their home at 2376 Central Avenue.

Society Drop-Outs Find Help At Centre Started by Nurse

TORONTO (CP) — Most of them look at social workers with contempt, have lost contact with society and can't find a place where they can try to get back on their feet, when they first come to Peggy Walpole.

They are women who have fallen afoul of society—prostitutes, drug addicts, thieves and alcoholics. About 80 per cent are lesbians; about two-thirds have been in jail.

For them Peggy Walpole, 30, opened Street Haven, a day centre where she is acting as a "big sister" for all who need help. No questions are asked, and everyone has unconditional entry.

She launched Street Haven in an empty beverage room in March, 1965, when she met some newly-released women offenders who had known her in Toronto's Don jail where she worked as a prison nurse.

WORK IS KEY

She started with $20 and no helpers. Now Street Haven has three locations, two in Toronto and one near the women's penitentiary in Kingston. The staff has grown to 60, five of them working full-time, the rest volunteers.

House rules are straightforward—no drugs, no liquor, no display of affection between lesbians.

The girls are involved in various day-to-day tasks. Volunteers visit Don jail and Mercer reformatory, also in Toronto, to help prisoners with advice.

Others travel with newly-released girls to job interviews to give moral support, and even take nervous girls to the dentist.

Miss Walpole believes work is the solution to one of the biggest problems of ex-convicts—a missing feeling of self-value.

"I always have a girl doing the office work, even though the typing takes five times as long. The sense of accomplishment a girl gets is tremendous in helping her regain her feeling of self-worth."

HAS MONEY PROBLEM

The centres are supported by the city of Toronto, the Alcoholics Research Foundation, the United Church and the federal government, but the contributions don't reach far enough. Miss Walpole needs money to improve emergency shelter facilities and set up another permanent residence.

"Then we'd have more chance to follow through what we begin with them in the Haven," she says. "It's terrible to have to say, 'We've taken you the first step, now so long'."

Since she started in 1965, she has dealt with about 1,000 girls—but not always successfully. Many refused to attend night school and adult training courses, and have dropped out. But she is philosophical about failures:

"I never started out with the idea of instant success. The Haven is no place for the do-gooder who wants to see instant improvement."

Couturier Opens New Boutique

NEW YORK (AP) Yves Saint Laurent, boy genius of French haute couture and $3,000-a-piece creations, says he's moving into the mass-produced, ready-to-wear clothing business.

Saint Laurent's first American boutique featuring the ready-to-wear will open here Thursday. Prices will range from $75 for a knit dress to about $250 for a gown or pants outfit.

"Eventually, we hope the prices will go down as the volume goes up," said the shaggy blonde couturier who took over the House of Christian Dior before he reached his 21st birthday.

Saint Laurent will continue designing for his haute couture clients, but he will also personally design each item in his Rive Gauche, or ready-to-wear, collection.

"The phenomenon of creation is the same, in the haute couture or the ready-to-wear; to me, there is no couture, there is just clothing," he said at a news conference Monday.

"I am not creating for the magazines. It is important for me that the clothes I like are immediately worn and accepted."

Back from Europe

Weather Fails to Spoil Federalists' Garden Party

Although the weather was anything but conducive to outdoor living on Saturday the World Federalists of Canada, Victoria Branch, held its scheduled garden party at Spencer Castle and raised $1,200 from the event.

The only 'casualty' was the speakers' corner which the group had planned to hold.

Mrs. A. E. Evans was the general convener. In charge of tea and kitchen arrangements were Mrs. George Pears, Mrs. Harvey Godfrey and Mrs. Gwen McKenzie. Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Collier handled receipts.

An army of students was recruited to serve tea. Acting as serviteurs were Cindy Cox, Martha Page, Bonnie Berringer, Donna and Joan Higgs, Elizabeth Bonner, Lynn McFeely, Penny Hobson, Rosalie Scott, Jocelyn Bates, Susanne Cross and Barbara Pearson.

A treasure auction was arranged by Mr. and Mrs. Ivor Burrows, Archdeacon A. E. Hendy and Mrs. Hendy, Mrs. Alan Wilson and Mrs. D. Yurex.

Dr. Howard Simmons took care of parking arrangements.

On the properties committee were Mrs. A. E. Evans, Ian Evans, Blaney Scott, Harvey Godfrey, David Stefoniec and Joyce Chope.

Mrs. Burchill, Mrs. E. Gould and Mrs. S. Finding took care of checking while serving at the gate were E. E. Higgs, Blaney Scott and H. Bevis. Miss M. Dickson sold raffle tickets.

Donation for Biafra Voted at WI Meeting

The sum of $50 was voted for Biafra relief when the Lake Hill Women's Institute met in its Quadra Street hall with Miss V. Sallis presiding.

Mrs. W. S. Buchanan, chairman of the solarium committee, told of a visit she had made to the group's new adoptee at the Queen Alexandra Solarium. The president reported on an Institute camp held at Strawberry Vale. Mrs. W. S. Webster gave a report on hospital and home visits.

It was reported that a WI workshop will be held at Strawberry Vale Community Hall on Oct. 8. Members were asked to take specimens of unidentified or diseased plants for a panel which Miss D. Page of the Victoria Horticultural Society will conduct.

It was decided to ask the Consumers' Association of Canada to investigate the labelling of sucaryl items, members being concerned that the labelling is in too fine a print.

Miss D. Gordon Cox was appointed vice-president for the remainder of the year. Mrs. George Light reported on the WI biennial conference held at the University of British Columbia. Mrs. W. Buchanan and Mrs. M. Berle served refreshments.

It was decided to hold the next meeting on Monday. There will be a tour of the Provincial Museum at 2 p.m., to be followed by a tea.

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

A lot of modern experts would disdain the two space response that Oswald Jacoby made to Helen Sobel Smith's opening heart bid. We would not say that they are nuts but rather that they are misguided. Jacoby was on his way to a slam and wanted to alert his partner right away.

Helen's three diamond rebid was normal, as was Jacoby's three hearts. Then Helen bid four clubs and it was up to Jacoby to do a little thinking. It was the second hand they had played together in 25 years and they were playing a cross between 1948 Goren and 1933 Culbertson or what might be called general common sense bidding.

Jacoby decided she was showing both the diamond and club aces as well as shortage in spades. How good were her trumps?

Culbertson had a method of finding out. The five no-trump grand slam force. Would Helen know about it? The bid disappeared in the '30s and has just come into expert popularity. There was nothing to lose. Helen would not pass at five no-trump. He bid it.

Helen said, "I guess I'm expected to do something." Then she thought awhile and bid the grand slam.

There was nothing to the play. With hearts and spades both breaking, anyone would make the grand slam but Helen exhibited the technique that would be expected of the greatest woman bridge player of all time. She won the heart in her own hand, led a spade to dummy's ace, a second heart to her hand, a second spade to dummy, drew the last trump and claimed the slam.

She had given herself a slight extra chance and would have made the contract against a 4-1 spade break if the four spades and long trump had been in the same hand.

$650,000 Swindle Gets But Six Months in Jail

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Anthony M. Arden embezzled $650,000 from a bank where he worked—and a judge was so impressed with his otherwise spotless record that he sentenced him today to only six months in prison.

Arden, 28, pleaded guilty to embezzling the money from the Union Commerce Bank here where he was an accounts administrator.

U.S. District Court Judge Thomas B. Lambros said he took Arden's "impeccable record through high school, college and business" into consideration in imposing sentence.

Lambros sentenced Arden to five years in prison but ordered only six months served and the rest of the time to be spent on probation.

Arden said he used the embezzled money to play the stock market. Most of the original sum had been returned. Arden went to work as a laborer and had worked his way up to shipping clerk by the time he was sentenced.

Nixon Adopts Cautious Note

WASHINGTON (CP) — Just seven weeks away from the Nov. 5 United States elections, Republican Richard Nixon, currently the favorite to win, is being as cautious as a tightrope walker.

Vice-President Hubert Humphrey, the Democratic party's candidate, on the other hand is displaying the form of a performer already halfway to the ground.

As for George Wallace, the former Alabama governor is turning on enthusiasm among crowds everywhhere with a pat speech extolling law and order. He is breezily confident his independent candidacy for the presidency will shock his two opponents.

"Nixon's the one," says the slogan of the former vice-president, making his second run for the White House. Various polls agree that this is certainly true now.

The New York Times, Newsweek and Time Magazine say Nixon would win more than the 270 Electoral College votes he needs if election were held now. The Gallup Poll shows Nixon ahead of Humphrey by 43 per cent to 31, with Wallace at 19.

The question is whether this pattern will last and what forces can shift it.

Still remembered is the 1948 under-dog triumph of Harry Truman over Thomas E. Dewey, the Republican who had been conceded the victory. That was another year when splinter parties—two of them—faced the Republicans and Democrats.

But 1968 does not appear to be 1948 as far as this electorate is concerned. The issues of law and order—which translates into anti-Negro sentiment for many—and Vietnam generate anger, frustration and a welter of hard-to-guage sentiment.

The shop-worn images of Nixon and Humphrey are not tailored to appeal to voters who are uncertain of which way to go. That includes Republicans who backed Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York or Democrats who supported the late Senator Robert Kennedy, or Senators Eugene McCarthy and George McGovern.

MODERATION

Nixon by careful design is pursuing the high road of moderation and generalities, a usual one for politicians well out in front and anxious to avoid the contentious gaffe thatt migh reduce leads. President Johnson adopted that course in 1964 generally against Republican Barry Goldwater and left the blood-letting to others.

Nixon's hatchet man is his vice-presidential running mate, Gov. Spiro Agnew of Maryland, who last week aroused criticism from his own party for calling Humphrey "squishy soft."

Nixon has declined to debate Vietnam. He has stuck to comments on law and order and hinted at, but not spelled out, a tougher anti-Communist foreign policy.

He has ignored Humphrey and Wallace personally.

Humphrey's camp has been disorganized and by reports is broke, which is a bad sign for a party normally flush with political contributions.

Humphrey has been reduced to desperate efforts to force Nixon into debate. He has been stuck with President Johnson's record, chiefly on Vietnam, and has been squelched with what appears to be deliberate presidential intervention when he seeks to veer from the hard line the president has enforced on settlement.

Mail Order Ammunition Ban Closer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gun control backers scored a triumph Monday when the U.S. Senate moved to outlaw mail order sales of all ammunition.

The action came as the Senate plowed through 63 amendments offered by the Senate judiciary committee to a gun control bill designed to prohibit the interstate sales of rifles and shotguns.

One would have exempted from proposed ammunition controls all shotgun shells, rifle bullets and .22-calibre ammunition. But the Senate rejected this amendment—which would have left interstate prohibition only on larger pistol and revolver ammunition—by a 41 to 36 vote.

Sen. Thomas Dodd (D-Conn.), manager of the bill, argued the amendment would exempt bullets such as those that killed President Kennedy and his brother Robert.

Small Home-Like Centres Urged To Care for Retarded Children

TORONTO (CP) — Suppose you are the parent of a retarded son.

He needs a home, treatment, care and love.

One of the most heartbreaking decisions you face is to send him to an institution, probably miles away.

The Canadian Association for Retarded Children believes government institutions must give way to smaller, more personal residences in local communities.

This Saturday in Welland County, two new community residences designed to give that individual care will hold open house.

Hawthorn Lodge in Port Colborne and Rosedale Home in Fort Erie are part of a model community services program for the entire Hamilton-Niagara area. The association hopes the pilot project will be copied in communities across Canada.

As well as the two residences, the project will include a diagnostic clinic that will assess the children, then follow up with counselling for their families. Many retarded children need therapeutic treatment even before they start school.

For those who are trainable, it will set up programs in sheltered workshops. A camp and a farm are planned.

Therefore the project will integrate sports and social activities with existing facilities in the community.

The Hamilton-Niagara project will try to et up at east one community residence in Hamilton, Burlington, Haldimand, West Lincoln, St. Catharines, Niagara Falls, and Welland.

Parents must pay something toward the cost; the minimum is $10 a month.

The province of Ontario pays 80 per cent of the operating cost of the homes; the county of Welland and the communities of Niagara Falls, Welland Port Colborne pay 15 per cent.

Records of the work done in the model services community plan will be avaiable to other interested towns across Canada.

The project was designed by a group of specialists from many professions who met in December 1963 to draw up projects that provinces could adopt.

Convicted Murderer Proved Not Guilty

GAFFNEY, S.C. (AP) — Roger Dedmond was told Monday that his conviction for murdering his wife had been overturned. "Is it over?" he asked. "Are you sure it is all over?"

"Maybe now the bad dreams will stop," he said. "It seems like 20 years. I'm glad it's over."

Another man, Lee Roy Martin, 31, of Gaffney, pleaded guilty Monday of murder in the 1967 slaying of Lucille Dedmond. Martin was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Dedmond, 29, was released on bail after Martin's arrest in February, pending a new trial. He had been in jail since the death of his wife in May, 1967, and had been sentenced to 18 years in prison last December.

CHARGE IS DROPPED

He was told in Charlotte, N.C., where he now lives, that the murder charge against him had been dismissed.

Martin also pleaded guilty Monday to a charge of murder in the strangulation in Febriary of Opal Dianne Buckson, 15, of Gaffney. He received a concurrent life sentence.

Martin is to be tried later on murder charges in the strangulations of Nancy Rinehart, 14, and Nancy Parrish, 20, both of Gaffney, also killed in February.

DEDMOND
. . . 'maybe dreams will stop'

A policeman testified at his trial that Dedmond confessed to killing his wife. Dedmond said he didn't remember what happened.

Immediately after Martin was sentenced Monday in Mrs. Dedmond's death, a judge in Circuit Court at Union, 30 miles away, dismissed the murder charge against Dedmond.

Farmers Protest Prescription for Medicated Feeds

The provincial government will establish regulations to control drugs used in animal husbandry although it may change some of the proposed rules before they come into force Oct. 1, Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford said Monday.

He made the comment after meeting for 1¾ hours with a delegation of about 50 B.C. Federation of Agricultre officials who were protesting some aspects of the proposed regulations.

The delegation claimed that the regulations, by requiring veterinary prescriptions for medicated feeds and drugs, would force farmers to buy drugs from druggists instead of feed stores at higher prices and would create hardship for farmers in isolated areas where there are no veterinarians.

CONFUSION EXISTS

"We're reviewing them at the present time but I think some of the delegation were confused about the regulations," said Mr. Shelford later.

He said the principal purpose of the new standards was to provide a means of controlling drugs used to increase animal production which might have a harmful effect on human consumers.

He said regulations are needed to control the situation before problems occur demanding severe measures such as a recent U.S. government order condemning a large consignment of cheese because a drug used to increase milk porduction of cows was found to have harmful side-effects on humans.

HAVE OPEN MIND

"We certainly have an open mind on the subject but we don't want to see all sorts of junk pumped into animals that are of no use and may be harmful to consumers," he said.

Mr. Shelford said the farmers' fear of higher costs was well taken but the department would ensure that no group had a monopoly position in the supply of the drugs and persons other than veterinarians would be designated to permit drug use in isolated farming areas.

He said the regulations were not intended to restrict the use of drugs for treatment of acute animal illnesses but to control the proliferating supplies of special drugs or medicated feeds intended to increase meat production.

EAT RIGHT TO DETERMINE SEX OF BABY

TAIPEI (Reuters) — A Nationalist Chinese gynaecologist claims he had found a formula to control the sex of babies before they are conceived.

Wu Chiung Ming, in a book just published entitled Sex Control and Sex Determination During Pregnancy, says a man hoping to father a boy should increase his intake of animal protein and avoid vegetarian food.

But the wife should do the opposite, Wu says. She should eat vegetables, fruit, beans, milk and have sodium carbonate injected into her womb.

If a couple hopes to have a girl, the formula should be reversed, Wu says.

Her Snakes Come Out Brighter

MARSHALL, Va. (AP) — When Mrs. J. E. Mottley heard her automatic washer stop, she went to the basement to remove the laundry.

Placing the damp clothes in the laundry basket, she spotted what appeared to be the belt of her multi-colored dress.

Her first inclination was to withdraw the belt from the tangle of laundry. But it began to move, on its own.

Horrified she watched a two-foot water moccasin snake weave itself through a hole in the laundry basket.

Mottley responded to his wife's call for help and killed the snake.

Mottley said he didn't know how the snake got into the washer or how it lived through the wash cycle. But he said it was the cleanest snake he'd ever seen.

He said Mr. Dorlot's application was supported by well-qualified Canadian scholars.

Mungo Martin Awards Given Three Indians

Three B.C. Indians have received Mungo Martin Memorial Fund awards to continue their academic or vocational training.

Helen Etzel, a member of the Ross River Indian Band enrolled at the Victoria Institute of Adult Studies, received $150. She hopes to complete her Grade 13 before entering university and a career of public health nursing.

An award of $150 also went to Molly Smith of Gilford Island, a student nurse at the Royal Columbian Hospital, New Westminster.

Mr. August's award represents his second received from the Fund. In 1967 he was also a winner for work in handicrafts.

Witchcraft Feared

KAMPALA (Reuters) — A 45-year-old Uganda farmer blamed for causing a crop-killing drought by witchcraft was beaten to death by fellow villagers at Bugerere County, 40 miles east of here, police said Monday. They are holding eight men in connection with the murder.

Rossillon Architect Of Agreements

MONTREAL (CP) — La Presse says Philippe Rossillon, a French civil servant described by Prime Minister Trudeau as an "agitator from France," was one of the main architects of the educational and cultural agreements concluded between France and Quebec.

In a story from Quebec, the newspaper published what it describes as the text of a confidential document sent by Rossillon to one of his French government colleagues Oct. 15, 1966.

"It will be noted," La Presse says, "that Mr. Rossillon outlines certain projects which now are the object of France-Quebec agreements, such as the Franco-Quebec youth bureau."

RCMP and immigration records show that Rossillon, head of France's high committee for the defence and expansion of the French language, has been coming to Canada since 1956 and has been in contact with Quebec separatists.

SENT BY FRANCE

It was after his latest visit, a two-week stay in Manitoba last month, that Mr. Trudeau said Rossillon was sent by France to "agitate" among French-speaking Manitobans.

La Presse says the 1966 Rossillon document suggests the establishment of permanent secretariats of French-speaking government ministers, a youth exchange bureau and an international academy of French grammar and terminology.

These proposals would involve such departments as education, youth and culture, and thus would not cause any diplomatic problems.

"These three projects could be implemented in a fairly short time," the document said.

"None of them would cause diplomatic difficulties; on the contrary, they would serve to confirm the interest France has in the French-speaking world . . ."

BOOZY BREATH GROUNDS RIDER

BRISBANE (Reuters) — An Australian aborigine cowboy was fined here Monday for being in control of a horse while drunk. Police stopped Cecil Atline as he rode his horse through Guilpie Township, Queensland state, and gave him a breath test which proved positive.

Baby Bonus for Mortgages Subject of Ontario Study

By J. C. GRAHAM
Canadian Press Correspondent

AUCKLAND (CP) — New Zealand's system by which child allowances can be used to pay for the family home was studied by Stanley J. Randall, Ontario trade and development minister, during his recent visit here.

New Zealand has had a social welfare grant, called the family benefit, since 1946, based on a weekly payment for each child. It is paid to the mother of all children under 16—up to 18 while they are still studying—and is the same irrespective of the number of children or the income of the parents. The present payment is $1.80 a week for each child.

Since 1960, parents have been permitted to capitalize the family benefit to assist in the purchase, alteration or repair of their home. That is, they can obtain in advance a lump sum which is the total that would accrue to any child up to the age of 16. Interest at 3 per cent only is charged.

$2,400 LIMIT

This sum must be used as payment toward housing. The total payment to any one family under the scheme is $2,400 and the option to take the benefit in this form is extended only to families not able to finance purchase otherwise.

The scheme was introduced with the idea that better housing and home conditions would contribute as much to the welfare of many children as any other expenditure on their behalf.

Many parents applied to take the family benefit in this form when the plan was first introduced. In 1960, $22,000,000 was paid out as capitalized family benefits of housing assistance.

After the initial rush of applications from parents with children of various ages, annual payments settled down to a lower level but the privilege is still freely used.

Last year capitalized benefits for houses totalled $9,600,000.

However, far more parents prefer to take the benefit in cash or as payments into a bank account. Last year benefits were paid for a total of 1,006,353 New Zealand children and the total sum involved was $85,000,000.

In some cases payments are used by parents for food, clothing and other basic household expenses. But in many cases mothers open bank accounts for their children and hold all family benefit payments in trust to be used for higher education, travel or other purposes.

New Divorce Law Sees Two Decrees Granted by Court

Two divorces were granted in Victoria Law Courts Monday under new grounds provided by Canada's amended divorce laws.

The first was granted to a Victoria woman on grounds of her husband's mental and physical cruelty.

The second was granted to a Victoria woman on grounds of separation for more than three years. But not until the husband and wife had stated, on oath, that they had each tried to reconcile the marriage.

The two divorces are the first of their kind to be granted in British Columbia. But divorce petitions based on the same grounds are pending in Vancouver and other places.

In the separation case, Brian R. D. Smith said the husband and wife had been separated for seven years and all attempts at a reconciliation had failed.

SPOUSES TESTIFY

Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton called first the wife and then the husband to the witness stand and asked if they had sincerely tried to reconcile their marriage.

"Yes, we have tried but unsuccessfully,", the wife said

"We have tried and tried," the husband testified. "We have seen a church minister and we have seen a psychiatrist. We just can't live together."

Mr. Smith said every effort had been made to reconcile the marriage.

"It seems there is no marriage left," he said.

Mr. Justice Wootton said that, since no children were involved, he felt justified in granting a decree absolute. This means both parties are free to marry again whenever they wish.

"I have concluded there is no possibility of reconciliation," Mr. Justice Wootton said, "and, in the matter of separation, it is clear the parties have not lived together since 1961."

OTHER DIVORCES

The remainder of Monday's divorces were granted to husbands under the old law of adultery.

Here is the divorce list:

Jean G. Lutes, 1681 Freeman Street, Victoria, from Allen W. Lutes, Vancouver. They were married at Vancouver in 1941.

Floralea Royston, 1406 Pembroke Street, Victoria, from Maurice E. Royston, 1122 Marchant Road, Victoria. They were married at Sidney in 1959.

Lt. Gov. Made Colonel Of Canadian Scottish

Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson has been appointed honorary colonel of the Canadian Scottish Regiment (Princess Mary's), it was announced Monday.

Mr. Nicholson, 66, succeeds Col. Frank Mackenzie Ross in the post. Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, the province's last lieutenant-governor, was an honorary colonel of the regiment before moving into Government House.

It is the second time Mr. Nicholson has become an army officer. During the Second World War he attained the rank of captain in the B.C. Regiment before being called to Ottawa as deputy controller of supplies in the department of munitions and supply.

The posting led to his being given the job of organizing Canada's synthetic rubber industry and subsequent establishment of the Crown-owned Polymer Corp. at Sarnia, Ont.

For these services he was awarded the Order of the British Empire.

In making the Monday announcement, Lt.-Col. George Urquhart, officer commanding the regiment, said Mr. Nicholson will be entertained Wednesday by regimental trustees at a Union Club dinner.

Afterwards he will meet regimental and attached officers at a reception in the Bay Street Armory officers' mess.

An October date is to be set for the new honorary colonel's first review of the whole regiment.

Adult Helpers Needed for Club

The club's fall program began Monday with only 57 instructors and supervisors instead of the 120 it requires.

Ron Havard, executive director, said "We need adult volunteers to supervise our craft classes, game rooms and library. This would be for a two-hour period once a week. No specific skills are needed, just a sincere interest in helping youth.

The clubhouse is at 1240 Yates Street.

Coastal Baselines Under Review

OTTAWA (CP) — Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said Monday the government's policy of using straight baselines for determining Canada's 12-mile coastal fishing zone is under review.

He was replying in the Commons to Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena) who said the government appears to be departing from its original policy.

Straight baselines were used to determine the 12-mile zone for the Labrador coast and the east coast of Newfoundland and it was announced that similar lines would be used for the rest of Canada's coastline.

However, there have been strong objections to this system from the U.S. and other countries which feel that Canada should base the zone on the contour of the coast. The straight baseline system goes from headland to headland, thus enclosing many bays as Canadian-only fishing areas.

Refuses Testimony

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Gene McKinney, who admitted he was with Huey Newton when a white policeman was slain, was sentenced to six months in jail Monday for refusing to testify at Newton's trial.

HOME GARDENING

Time to Pull Annuals

By HILDA BEASTALL

Hilda

There is no set date for clearing the beds of summer annuals, for gardeners who depend on this type of plant as their main interest are reluctant to discard them. The end of these short-lived plants usually comes at some time during September. In years when this month brings us sunny warm days and cool nights, the zinnias and marigolds will continue blooming right up to a frosty night perhaps at the end of the month.

This year we have had considerable rain and wind, and these are taking their toll of summer flowers.

It is unlikely for petunias and double asters to look presentable much longer with this type of weather, and nothing is gained by leaving them in the ground once they are spoiled by the elements.

They will indeed do far more good after being pulled up and put in layers on the compost heap with some soil still attached.

The spaces can be lightly forked over and levelled ready for planting daffodils, tulips, wallflowers, Brompton stocks or other biennial plants to bloom next year.

Or your plans may call for a more labor saving and permanent planting of flowering shrubs of the hundreds of different kinds available for growing here.

Whatever is planted into the ground this fall, remember, no fresh manure of any sort, and no quick acting fertilizer should be used.

And when peatmoss is used be sure it is well dampened in a pail or wheelbarrow before adding, even though the soil is wet.

Live-Wire Takes on All To Save Centre

TORONTO (CP) — The future of Toronto's Royal Ontario Museum rests on a crumbling financial structure. Peter Swann, who became director two years ago, is conducting a one-man crusade to save the popular facility in midtown Toronto.

As a one-man campaigner, Mr. Swann was successful in detaching the museum from the jurisdiction of the University of Toronto. Just four months ago, Education Minister William Davis announced a $550,000 boost to the museum's $2,150,000 budget.

With an eye to the future growth, Mr. Swann reacted by stating that this boost was "too little and too late." He contended that another $300,000 are required.

An outspoken cirtic of the financial promises from the provincial government, Mr. Swann now finds himself in a delicate situation. His draft of the 1970 museum spending estimates has just gone to the department.

If the province elects to take no chances with the 1970 budget, one can expect more verbal salvos to come from the ROM director. Explaining how his views on finance ruffled government feathers, Mr. Swann said his statements were premeditated.

The energetic director came to Toronto following extensive rebuilding tasks at Princeton University and Oxford's famed Ashmoleum Museum. He said he accepted the ROM job from the University of Toronto president, Dr. Claude Bissell, to resurrect "one of the world's great museums that was on its way out — a laughing-stock, a place with great collections that had been neglected for 20 years."

WAS FALLING APART

"The place was disintegrating," Mr. Swann said. "Priceless collections were just falling apart with no temperature control."

"It's been a very tough two years. Before I attacked the government, I didn't sleep for a week. I'm built like an ox, but this has taxed by strength."

Outside sources said "the Establishment" tried to gag the colorful museum director. His explosive press debut was said to have brought an appeal to Dr. Bissell, then his immediate superior, to muzzle the maverick.

Mr. Swann's critics were answered through an official statement from Dr. Bissell's office praising the director as "a breath of fresh air."

SET UP FUND

Despairing of government support, Mr. Swann created a trust fund, kicking it off with $1,000 of his own, and invited the 17-member museum board to follow suit. All but three declined.

Money started coming in to the trust find, and the response turned into the purchasing of two new treasures: a Ming enamelled box and a Greek vase. When Mr. Swann wanted a protoceratops dinosaur, enough children dropped their nickels and dimes into a collection box to raise the $1,500 in 15 weeks. Private donations and more collections helped raise $25,000 for a precious Egyptian mural fragment.

For the first time, a municipal government responded as Metro Toronto contributed $10,000. The biggest boost of all came when the provincial government nearly doubled the 1968 budget to $2,150,000.

FULL OF LIFE

The ROM today is full of life. The interior has been sandblasted and displays have been erected at the corner of Bloor Street and Queen's Park Crescent.

"We had to bring the museum out into the street," Mr. Swann says, "to get rid of the sort of minimum — security-prison impression everybody had of this place. For years, the museum just sat there and everybody thought of it as a sort of mausoleum. They don't understand that it can be a dynamic place."

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Farmers Supported Tariff Protection

By BOB BOWMAN

The first federal election in Canada using the secret ballot was held on September 17, 1878. Sir John A. Macdonald welcomed the election but was opposed to the secret ballot. He said that men should not be afraid to stand up and be counted.

Macdonald had been Leader of the Opposition since January, 1874, when the Liberals, led by Alexander Mackenzie, had defeated his government as a result of the CPR railway scandal.

Mackenzie was confident that the Liberals would be returned. The early returns from the Maritimes were all for the Liberals, but then the tide turned, as it did in the election last June. Quebec and Ontario voted for Macdonald, and the sweep continued across the continent. The strange thing was that even the farmers were voting for Macdonald's new policy of tariff protection.

Macdonald had made a powerful case for industrial support when he said "Not only is this country being made a slaughter market by being overwhelmed by the sweepings of the United States, but it has sometimes been made a sacrifice market. We all remember what the salt manufacturers of the United States did when a salt industry opened at Goderich, Ontario. The salt manufacturers of Syracuse and Salena sent in their salt with instructions to undersell Canadian salt on the Canadian market, to crush the infant industry. The shoe trade was dealt with in the same way by the leather manufacturers of the United States."

When the votes were counted Macdonald had reversed Mackenzie's majority although Macdonald himself was defeated in Kingston, Ont., and had to be given a safe seat in Victoria, B.C. Macdonald represented Victoria for several years although he had never been west of Ontario.

Other events on September 17:

1674—Quebec Council regulated prices.

1705—Marquis of Vandreuil was made Governor of Canada.

1814—Americans were repulsed at Fort Erie.

1843—Suspension Bridge was opened over Chaudiere Falls, Ottawa.

1851—Macdonald, Hincks, and McNab attended celebration in Boston of opening of railway service to Montreal.

LIVE OVER 100, EAT URCHINS

TOKYO (AP) — A 116-year-old man and a 115-year-old woman were among Japan's oldest residents honored during the country's 14th annual Respect the Aged Day Sunday.

Jubei Nakamura, who retired as a fisherman at 75, marked the occasion with a walk around his house after eating two bowls of rice and raw fish for breakfast. He does not drink or smoke and credits his longevity partly to a diet of sea urchins. Physicians said he is in good health but his legs are weak.

Jaman's eldest woman, Mrs. Ito Nakamura, succeeded her father as head of a Buddhist temple when he died in 1889. She, too, was pronounced healthy by physicians.

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a World Book Atlas.

Andy sends a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Beverly Munn, age 12, of Maryside, New Brunswick, Canada for her question:

Is it true that snakes swallow their young?

A snake seems to be a secretive and mysterious fellow and several ancient civilizations adopted him as a symbol of wisdom. Later peoples learned to mistrust his snaky ways. Then all sorts of likely and unlikely tales were spread around to warn people to beware of the sneaky snake.

We all have our likes and dislikes for the various members of the animal kingdom. But many of us base our preferences from the human point of view and, you must admit, this is hardly fair. Each animal species lives in a world of his own. His methods of coping are dictated by the voice of nature and are entirely his own business. Zoologists regard the snake from an objective, scientific point of view. Pet owners who keep snakes feel a fondness for them based on acquaintanceship. But most people have an abiding horror of them. A lot of this discrimination is based on hearsay handed down through many generations.

some of the popular tales you hear about snakes are true, some are partially true, and some are downright rubbish. Almost all these tales are highly exaggerated and since few of us have a chance to study snakes at first hand, they are hard to verify. But two of the popular snake yarns can be laughed out of court. The milk snake is not guilty of sucking milk from a cow. He could not perform this trick if he tried. The hoop snake does not grasp his tail in his teeth and bowl along the ground like a hoop. This is a good idea, but no snake ever thought of it.

However, the report that certain poisonous and constrictor snakes are dangerous to human beings is deadly accurate. But when you consider that snakes have their own world, you must agree that it is up to the human population to learn how to recognize and protect themselves from the small group of menacing snake species. The rumor that snakes swallow their young is somewhere between the true and the untrue. It is possible but not likely and in any case no mother snake deliberately contemplates devouring her own offspring.

Discards Eggs

Scientists know that the secretive snake is not smart enough to contemplate any sort of scheme. Mrs. Snake is not even intelligent enough to feel any affection for her children. Some snakes lay eggs and leave them to hatch in the ground and a few coil a round their eggs to keep them warm. But when the youngsters are ready to hatch, these mothers lose interest and go away. Some snakes give birth to live babies and these mothers also take no interest after their babies are born. All snakes, however, are meat eaters and many of them eat snakes smaller than themselves. A mother snake might come across one or two of her own teen-agers and eye them as possible groceries. In which case, if she can catch up with them, she may swallow them alive.

Affection for offspring is part and parcel of native intelligence in certain members of the animal world. It is hard for us to imagine the snake's low rating in both these departments. But parent snakes discard their children and do nothing to instruct them or help them to cope with their world. Young snakes never know their parents and if they meet accidentally later in life, they do not recognize each other. A mother snake who swallows her young has no way of knowing what she is doing. However, her youngsters usually know enough to keep out of her way—otherwise there would be no snakes left in the world.

* * *

Andy sends a World Book Globe to Ellen Kaufman, age 8 of Allentown, Pennsylvania, for her question:

When did Andy start his column?

Andy loves answering the questions of curious children and he made this his special work in ancient days, long before you were born. More than 20 years ago, when your mother was very young, he wrote the very first book of questions and answers just for children. But this did not answer them all and he kept getting more. So he decided to answer two each day in a newspaper column. This was a brand new idea. But the editor of your newspaper and lots of other editors thought it was a good idea. The very first Ask Andy column appeared in the newspapers on June 22, 1952. This was more than 16 years ago—but the June 22 date is easy for Andy to remember because it happens to be his birthday.

Constitution Talks Called by Trudeau

Times News Services

Prime Minister Trudeau announced in Ottawa today he has invited all Canadian premiers to a top-level constitutional conference in late November or early December.

He added in a reply to Creditiste Leader Real Caouette that he is still waiting for replies from the provinces.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield asked Mr. Trudeau to give the agenda for discussions which have been held by federal and provincial officials on the constitution.

Mr. Trudeau said the agenda was drawn up at the February constitutional conference, was made public then and is being followed.

The discussions of officials were being held in private. The provinces had been firm on this point and were "quite right" in their stand.

There was no immediate reaction from provincial premiers although most were expected to favor the idea.

QUESTION MARK

A major question mark was British Columbia's reaction but, with Premier Bennett in Europe on his annual overseas trip, this could not be determined immediately.

Acting government leader Kenneth Kiernan said he has not received any communication from Mr. Trudeau and he would not comment on the conference proposal "until I have studied the matter with my colleagues in cabinet."

It is unlikely that Mr. Bennett would reject the call although it is not beyond the bounds of possibility.

He was sharply criticized last fall when he ducked out of the Robarts Confederation for Tomorrow conference and sent former attorner-general Robert Bonner in his place and again was criticized when he left last February's milestone federal-provincial constitutional conference in Ottawa a day early, tagging the province with "the empty chair" symbol.

BACKS REFORMS

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson hinted that the provincial government did not wish to continue its image as a confederation "drop out", when last week he commented on the throne speech with the assurance that B.C. wishes to co-operate in constitutional reforms.

In Winnipeg, Manitoba Premier Walter Weir expressed his willingness to meet federal officials in answer to an earlier call for federal-provincial talks on shared-cost programs.

"We are aware of the importance of establishing priorities in government spending," the premier said in commenting on an announcement by Prime Minister Trudeau that a federal-provincial conference will be called this fall in an effort to trim the cost-sharing programs.

The winter works program, under which the federal government absorbed part of the labor costs of municipal projects, already has been discontinued.

Mr. Weir said he agreed priorities must be set but added the impact of cutting back spending must also be studied.

He had no immediate comment on today's call by the prime minister for talks on the constitution.

TRUDEAU WARNS:

New Programs Limited By Resources

By STAN McDOWELL
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau Monday fitted a catalogue of his government's accomplishments in a scholarly discussion of the challenge to modern parliamentary democracy.

He told the 28th Parliament that it must deal with problems that would have staggered a Macdonald or a Laurier. He warned of "a spreading concern that the traditional techniques of governments are incapable of responding adequately and in time to the changing needs of society."

And he got down to specifics to answer, point by point, opposition criticism of his government's position on poverty, Biafra and Czech refugees.

Meeting the demands of the old politics while awaiting the birth of the new, Mr. Trudeau replied to the non-confidence motion of Conservative leader Robert Stanfield by suggesting that the Opposition leader would have felt the motion necessary even if the speech from the throne "had been dictated by the Holy Ghost himself."

KEY QUESTIONS

Speaking after Mr. Stanfield on party leaders' day in the debate on the speech from the throne, Mr. Trudeau said the central questions facing the session were "about the kind of country in which we want to be living in and the directions in which we should be moving to build such a country."

He offered his answer:

"The people of this country want to live in a land with a rising standard of living, equitably distributed amont regions and individuals.

"They want a social security system which will underwrite the risks and hazards of modern life and provide minimum standards of health and welfare for every citizen.

"They want a country which is in the forefront of scientific and technical advance and which is adequately equipped with facilities for education and research.

"They want a society which has not lost sight of man's spiritual values, of his un-

Criticism From Paris Unanswered

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said today he does not intend to react to criticisms of him made in Paris Monday by French Foreign Minister Michel Debre.

Robert Thompson (PC—Red Deer) said the "extraordinary" Debre speech had accused the prime minister of making false statements. Would Mr. Trudeau complain?

"No," the prime minister replied. Then he added, with a grin:

"Even politicians of this country accuse the prime minister of making false statements."

Mr. Debre said in Paris that Mr. Trudeau had been badly informed about the activities of Philippe Rossillon, a French official accused by Mr. Trudeau of agitating among French-speaking groups in Canada.

More U.S. Troops Going to Europe

WASHINGTON (AP)—Defence Secretary Clark M. Clifford said today that 20,000 to 40,000 additional American troops would be sent to Europe sooner than originally scheduled for participation in NATO military manoeuvres. He told reporters the schedule for the manoeuvres had been advanced and the extra U.S. forces would be in Europe ready to participate early next year.

SEEKING PROVINCIAL LAW enabling city of Ottawa to impose rent controls is Ottawa alderman Ken Fogarty (right) who outlines proposals to Transport Minister Paul Hellyer, chairman of seven-man federal committee which is holding public hearings on housing problems.

Home Crisis Evident When Mortgage Due

By DENNIS ORCHARD

OTTAWA (CP)—People will tell you what's the matter with housing.

"To get into a home I'll have to carry a first and second mortgage at $217 a month."

"It reduces a man's pride to send his wife to work so he can buy a home and pay for it."

"I don't want to buy my own house. I don't think government should lay out subsidies so others can."

These were some of the beefs, comments and problems that met Transport Minister Hellyer and his housing inquiry in a two-hour visit Monday night to an Ottawa housing development.

TRIED EXPERIMENT

It was an experiment—on the first day of the cross-country study—and the members of the inquiry were delighted with the results.

About 200 tenants of the $30,000,000 Bayshore apartment and town house development on Ottawa's western outskirts turned up for the session in a hot school auditorium.

They roasted landlord Irving Greenberg about his rents—typically $180 to $210—but he came back strongly with figures of his own about property taxes. And he closed the evening with a fiery attack on provincial and federal sales taxes that won applause.

OFFER SUGGESTIONS

Their suggestions to reduce housing costs and to make more homes available:

—Build more quality into urban development to save rebuilding costs in the near future.

HEAVY GUNS SHELL TOWNS

By United Press International

Israeli and Jordanian forces shelled towns and villages across the Jordan River ceasefire line today in an escalation of border warfare. Israeli officials said the Jordanians for the first time used Czech-made katusha rocket launchers.

The across-the-river duels usually involve light arms, mortars and machinegun against military objectives, but today both sides used artillery against populated places despite a warning on radio Israel that Israel would inflict "great destruction" on Jordan if the shellings continued.

Woman Shot To Death In Sudbury

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — An unidentified woman was shot to death and her male companion wounded today as they sat in a car behind a Sudbury hotel.

Witnesses said a lone gunman driving a car with Quebec licence plates drove up behind the couple at 10:05 a.m., got out and fired three shots at them.

The woman was believed to be in her 20s.

Gordon Thrush, 38, of Sudbury was still conscious when taken to hospital with two bullets in his neck. He was listed in critical condition.

After the shooting, witnesses said, the gunman drove away at high speed. A .22-calibre rifle with the stock cut off was found under the Thrush car.

NATO TALKS SCHEDULED IN NOVEMBER

LONDON (UPI) — An emergency session of the council of ministers is being planned after the U.S. presidential elections to review military and defence strategy of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in light of the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia, diplomatic sources said today.

The sources said preparations already are being made for the meeting in mid-November at NATO headquarters in Brussels.

They said the emergency session will be preceded by top level consultations of NATO foreign ministers attending the UN general assembly in New York.

Biafran Citadel Falling

By ARNOLD ZEITLIN

LAGOS (AP) The Nigerian army reported capture of the Biafran town of Owerri Monday, shrinking the rebel territory to 10 per cent of its original size.

The seizure of Owerri left Biafra with only one major town, Umuahia, the headquarters of the rebel chief of state, Lt.-Col. C. Odumegwu Ojukwu. Federal troops, pressing from the north and the south, were reported only 30 miles away in either direction.

Biafra, formerly Eastern Nigeria, was 29,000 square miles May 30, 1967, when Ojukwu declared its independence from the Nigerian federation.

It now has left approximately 3,000 square miles, into which some 6,000,000 persons, mostly members of the Ibo tribe, have fled to escape the advancing federal armies. The Ibos believe the Nigerians are trying to exterminate them.

But despite the steady advance of federal troops, the Biafrans showed no inclination to surrender. Information Commissioner I. Y. Eke said Biafra's "will to survive is unconquerable." This was considered an answer to the resolution by the Organization of African Unity calling on Biafra to surrender and restore Nigerian unity.

The federal announcement of the capture of Owerri said civilians were returning to the town and the Nigerian troops were caring for them.

FATE IN DOUBT

Among the refugees who had fled before the federal advance were scores of British and American wives of Ibos and dozens of Irish, German, British and Dutch Roman Catholic priests and nuns. Their fate was unknown, but the British High Commission in Lagos urged the Nigerian government to protect their lives if possible.

The Biafrans were reported still putting up resistance at various points. Informed sources in Lagos said Biafran forces had driven units of the Nigerian 3rd Marine Division from the lakeshore town of Ogutain, in the western sector. The town commands the southerly approaches to the Biafran airstrip at Uli-Ihiala.

Leave Cyprus Says John D.

OTTAWA (CP) — John Diefenbaker said in the Commons today Canada should withdraw its troops from the United Nations peacekeeping force on Cyprus and save the $3,500,000 a year it is costing to keep them there.

Prime Minister Trudeau said he would discuss the idea with the cabinet ministers involved.

Mr. Diefenbaker said Archbishop Makarios, the Cypriot president, had stated that Canadian troops could be pulled out without any danger to the future peace of the island. Canada alone was paying its own way in the peacekeeping assignment.

Canada has contributed to the force continuously since it was set up in 1964 to keep peace between Greek- and Turkish-Cypriots. There now are about 800 Canadian troops on the island.

Outside the Commons, Defence Minister Cadieux said the Canadian contingent will be reduced by 285 men in October during the usual rotation of Canadian troops.

MP Urges Complaint Probe

OTTAWA (CP) — A special committee of Parliament to investigate citizens' complaints about the abuse of authority by government officials was proposed today by Gerald W. Baldwin (PC—Peace River).

Speaking in the Commons throne speech debate, he said the committee should be given the widest powers to look into such complaints. Over the years much of Parliament's authority had been delegated to government departments and agencies and there should be a check on how it is handled.

Mr. Baldwin, the Conservative House leader, said action of this kind has been promised for years by the Liberals without signs of progress. The former prime minister, Lester B. Pearson, had told him four years ago something was being done.

Lack of such a check system was "a grave defect" in parliamentary democracy.

Discussing the reform of Commons rules and procedures, he said the government's proposals for the adoption of provisional rules in this session were made only the day before Parliament opened. They had not been acceptable to the Conservatives.

Mr. Baldwin said he agrees with most of Prime Minister Trudeau's philosophy on the need to make Parliament more efficient through rules changes. But the same kind of talk had been heard for years.

Rules were too important a matter to be left to House leaders of the parties. Their reform must be the subject of free and open debate, in Parliament, the press and the country.

He predicted that the government will shortly introduce its own rules proposals in the Commons and use its large majority to endorse them.

Opposition Flays 'Dull' Program

By JOYCE FAIRBAIRN
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Opposition parties Monday trained their guns on Prime Minister Trudeau charging that he has let the hopes of millions of Canadians drop with a thud.

The formal throne speech debate opened with non-confidence motions from the Conservatives and New Democrats which attacked the government for refusing to set out guidelines for its "just society."

Conservative leader Robert Stanfield's motion, which will be voted on Thursday, said the government had failed to recognize urgent economic and social problems or present Parliament with priorities to implement the just society.

David Lewis, in his first speech as acting NDP leader in the Commons, attached the specific areas of housing, urban development, unemployment and poverty to the Tory motion.

For the first time since 1962 there is no numerical possibility whatever that the government could be defeated on either vote.

JUST FOKMALITY

With a clear government majority, non-confidence motions now become a matter of formality except in the unlikely event of a back-bench Liberal revolt.

As the throne speech itself failed to stir the blood, the opposition critics saw little on which to base a dynamic attack.

By GENE KRAMER

PRAGUE (AP) — Thousands of Soviet troops have big guns aimed at Prague to keep pressure on Czechoslovakia's leaders.

Heavy cannon, rockets and missiles point at Czechoslovakia's capital from all directions.

One military expert says there is more than enough artillery to destroy the 600-year-old city.

There are 24 big guns set up in alfalfa fields less than eight miles east of Prague. Their barrels point toward the capital. The guns appear to be 122-millimetre cannon with a range of more than nine miles.

A mile or so farther, five batteries of multiple rocket launchers point at the city.

A few hundred yards beyond the end of Prague's Strasnice streetcar line, two score Soviet T-55 medium tanks are parked, their guns directed toward the city.

Northwest of Prague, near the village of Hormerice, more than 50 big guns are concentrated within half a mile. They include at least 18 122-millimetre howitzers, six huge 152-millimetre cannon plus 85-millimetre guns and 57-millimetre automatic anti-aircraft batteries. Some travellers have also seen missiles mounted on tanks aimed at Prague from the east and several tank regiments.

Estimates of the total number of occupation troops ringing Prague range up to 90,000.

The guns are visible to Czechs picking apples in nearby orchards or passing on their motorcycles.

The implication is that all the hardware is there to frighten the people and intimidate their liberal Communist leaders to meet Soviet demands.

One major demand, for renewed censorship of press and radio, is being enforced. As a result, details are meagre on the continuing talks between Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vassily Kuznetsov and the Czechoslovak leaders.

The Soviet demands are also believed to include permanent stationing of Soviet troops at the West German border and tough action against Czechoslovaks who engaged in what Moscow regards as anti-Communist activity during the January-to-August days of liberalization.

Weatherman Denounced; Didn't Warn of Downpour

LONDON (CP) — Britons denounced their weathermen today for not warning them of the three-day downpour that flooded huge areas of souhteast England, caused three deaths and did millions of pounds worth of damage.

The floods covered hundreds of square miles, marooning families, isolating towns and villages and disrupting road and rail services.

Members of the oHuse of Commons said that the meteorologists gave no indication Saturday of the dangers ahead and said they would raise the matter in the House.

"We haven't got a computer sufficienlty powerful to make an accurate forecast of the rainfall on a day-to-day basis."

Rain Monday night added a fresh threat to areas not already under water and hampered rescue operations by police and troops.

EVACUATE THOUSANDS

Thousands of persons were evacuated from inundated homes and housed in temporary quarters.

The British Automobile Association said that almost every stream and river in southeast England was at danger level.

Army amphibious vehicles were sent to Dalham, near Newmarket race course, where some places were under 11 feet of water. In Norfolk, the coastal resorts of Great Yarmouth and Lowestoft were cut off by flooded roads.

The weathermen forecast more rain today but added that drier weather was on the way.

With millions of gallons of water pouring down from hills and fields, no let-up in the four-day-old downpour is expected until at least Thursday.

Sea Can Assist Food Problems

KELOWNA (CP) — The high protein content of fish can do much to relieve the food problems of hungry nations, a food processing and packaging conference here was told Monday.

Norman Hyland, chairman of B.C. Packers Ltd., told the 60th general conference of the Pacific Northwest Trade Association that although fish can do much to relieve the food problems of the world it is not the complete answer.

"Agriculture has to provide the bulk of the nutrients," he said. "But we need all the resources of the land and sea if the world is to be fed."

He said the world's fish catch is 60,000,000 metric tons and rising, but the yield could be increased by catching species of smaller fish.

Ottawa Probes 'Tax Free Plant'

OTTAWA (CP) — An investigation is being made into the income tax position of a chemical and oil refinery project at Come-By-Chance, Nfld., being built with provincial aid, Finance Minister Benson said in the Commons Monday.

He said the question has arisen of whether this and "several other companies" are taxable and an investigation would soon be completed.

Max Saltsman (NDP—Waterloo) raised the issue in the House, referring to an editorial in the magazine Canadian Petroleum that says Premier Smallwood of Newfoundland and a private promoter have worked out a deal that will avoid income taxes on the Come-By-Chance plant.

Douglas Harkness (PC—Calgary Centre) said the Newfoundland operation could cause "very serious disruption" in the Canadian petroleum industry. In times of over-production, a tax-free producer could undercut competitors.

LOAN GUARANTEED

Canadian Petroleum says that under a deal arranged by Mr. Smallwood and American promoter John Shaheen the province will guarantee a $30,000,000 loan to be repaid by Mr. Shaheen over 30 years. At the end of this period Mr. Shaheen can buy the refinery at a nominal sum.

During the life of the agreement the plant will be owned by a provincial Crown corporation, the magazine adds, which will enjoy an exemption from income tax, provincial sales taxes of building materials and property taxes.

Big Three Support Auto Pact

OTTAWA (CP) — Chrysler Corp. has linked the possibility of a new plant in Canada with removal of government regulations which is says affect costs and productivity.

President Ron W. Todgham of Chrysler, in a Aug. 15 letter to Trade Minister Pepin, which was tabled in the Commons Monday, said the parent Chrysler Corp. has been "looking with favor" on the prospect of locating a new major plant in Canada.

"The elimination of those factors which result from government regulation or legislation, and which increase our costs, will improve our ability to attract such a plant to Canada," he said.

Mr. Todgham's letter, reviewing performance of the Canada-U.S. auto pact over its first three years, was made public along with similar letters from the heads of the General Motors and Ford subsidiaries in Canada.

All three letters spoke favorably of the pact but complained of "impediments" to its full implementation.

Mr. Todgham called for Canadian efforts to ensure that the agreement would continue on a long-term basis to eliminate uneasiness over a possible termination.

E. H. Walker, president and general manager of General Motors of Canada Ltd., said the industry has had to operate "under certain conditions which appear contrary to the basic objectives of the agreement such as duties and sales tax on plant, construction material equipment, tooling and shipping containers."

Karl E. Scott, president of Ford Motor Co. of Canada, also asked for removal of "remaining impediments which hamper efficient operations in Canada." He said these had been summarized in a previous letter to the government.

GRAIN

CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat futures fell more than three cents and set seasonal lows again under liquidation on the Board of Trade today. Trade in all pits was fairly active and mixed.

Rain in some sections of the country tended to influence buying of soybeans and corn futures. After these prices had advanced about a cent, profit-taking entered the pits and both commodities declined.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Prices were generally easier with most action in oilseeds in light trading today on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange.

Flax trading was mixed and there was some inter-month spreading. Exporters were buying on the scale down. Scattered commission house selling and hedge offerings in rapeseed met thin commercial support.

Oats and barley were barely active and there was thin exporter buying in rye.

Strapped by Provincial Law Victoria Schools Keep Strap

By DON VIPOND

The strap will stay in Greater Victoria schools.

The emotion-charged controversy over abolishing corporal punishment, meaning the strap, ended Monday night when trustees were told the matter was beyond their legal jurisdiction.

About 50 spectators crowded into the board room to hear chairman Peter Bunn regretfully rule trustee John Porteous' motion out of order.

It was Mr. Porteous who touched off the bitter running debate two months ago by calling for abolishment of the strap throughout the school district.

Since then there has been strong disagreement among trustees and public debate has raised the ire of teachers.

LEGAL ADVICE

Mr. Bunn said Monday night he had received legal advice that the Public Schools Act and Rules of the Council of Public Instruction (the cabinet) put disciplining in the hands of teachers.

The council instructions state in part:

"Every teacher shall practise such discipline as may be exercised by a kind, firm, and judicious parent in his family, avoiding corporal punishment, except when it shall appear to him to be necessary, and then a record of the offence and the punishment shall be made in a register used for the purpose and kept in the principal's office. . ."

The record is open for inspection only to the superintendent of schools or his representative, the district superintendent of schools and trustees.

Trustees passed another motion on the subject Monday which has the board on record as supporting principals and teachers "in the difficult task of practising discipline" as a "judicious parent" would.

Corporal punishment will thus continue to decrease rapidly, "hopefully to its ultimate complete disappearance," the motion said.

In the two months since the issue was first aired, trustees Bunn and Porteous have been the most vocal on the subject.

'FIT OF TEMPER'

Mr. Porteous has said children have been strapped in primary grades, "very often in a fit of temper." He has termed the strap "a relic of the middle ages."

Mr. Bunn has said he wants to know why some schools get by without strapping while others have the threat of it "hanging like the sword of Damocles in the front hall."

Both trustees have said they have had numerous calls from parents over the years alleging discipline abuses at schools.

Just how upset principals and teachers have been by the debate became apparent in a letter from John Smith, president of the 1,260-member Greater Victoria Teachers' Association, read to the board Monday night.

His fellow teachers had directed him to write trustees "expressing the concern of our membership over the unsubstantiated statements in the press relating to corporal punishment attributed to members of the board.

'NOTHING BUT HARM'

"The manner in which this subject has been dealt with has accomplished nothing but harm to the educational climate in Greater Victoria. It is most regrettable that this should have happened at a time when teachers, administration staff, trustees, PTAs, and other civic groups should be working in close co-operation to provide better education in this community.

"If we are to pursue the current trend toward more freedom—both for pupils and teachers—then a major review of disciplinary measures in this district is essential.

"Surely corporal punishment cannot be treated in isolation from the many problems with which teachers are faced in the classrooms."

Mr. Smith wrote that he had been instructed to request an immediate beginning on a continuing joint study "of the entire educational picture" in the school district.

The letter was referred to the board's education committee.

IN-CAMERA MEETINGS

Mr. Porteous said he and Mr. Bunn had been "victims of chastisement" "for shooting off our mouths," but two in-camera meetings with principals last week had failed to convince him he was wrong.

Most teachers are not concerned with the issue, he said, because most are not involved.

He said he was sorry if the debate had created an atmosphere of distrust. But raising it had not been an impulsive act.

"Parents have approached me many times."

Mr. Bunn said he had taken no pleasure in making the ruling he had to on the motion.

"Basically, I am opposed to the use of corporal punishment in our schools."

CRIMINAL CODE

He quoted the Criminal Code to illustrate "it's quite legal to bash kids around."

The code provision:

"It is lawful for every parent or person in place of a parent, schoolmaster or master, to use force by way of correction towards any child, pupil or apprentice under his care, providing such force is reasonable under the circumstances."

In a prepared statement, he said: "How much respect does a little child have for the person who hits him? Fear, yes; respect, no.

"Does a young lady of 14 or 15 respect the man who hits her for breaking a rigid school rule? No respect here, only resentment.

"Does hitting a child prove anything?

"To me, it proves but one thing, the person doing the hitting has already lost his case. It is an admission of failure."

The chairman said that during five hours of discussion with principals, the board heard that retention of the strap is required by many.

"Yet some schools never use the strap and others quite frequently. Why is there this difference?"

Principals and teachers in some places and on some occasions are working in situations far short of ideal, and great effort is being made to improve conditions, he added.

He said he agreed with the teachers' association that corporal punishment could not be considered as a separate issue.

Trustee Dr. Carron Jameson said the board deserved some condemnation when it erred "by trying to make a decision on high before discussions with teaching staff."

"We're right back where we were before," said trustee Ted Wood. Strapping is unnecessary, legislation should be changed and school boards across B.C. should join forces to do battle.

HIGH SALARIES

Trustee Dr. Victor Rogers said he was amazed at the amount of emotion the subject could generate.

Change the words from corporal punishment to "strapping on the hands" and the drama is gone, he suggested.

The school board employs teachers, pays them high salaries and should trust them to use sound judgment. He said he had never found any evidence strapping does either physical or psychological harm.

"But," he added, "we have got to accept that teachers are human. Now and again they will make mistakes, be exasperated, perhaps use the strap when they would not normally.

"So would we all, faced with the same situation."

What are the alternatives? he asked.

It would be "rather silly" and "absurd" to bring in a bevy of psychology counsellors to replace the strap.

He said he was against corporal punishment in the same way he was opposed to boxing. But the issue had been magnified out of all proportion "and almost made us the laughing stock of the whole district."

The closed meetings with the principals had shown most of them were opposed to corporal punishment, said trustee Les Kariaganis.

And, added trustee Cecil Wyatt, a study showed strapping incidents had dropped by about 30 per cent last year.

REBEL STUDENT MAY BE DEAF

Dr. Malcolm Graham was among a crowd of spectators on hand to hear trustees debate discipline measures in the schools.

An ear specialist, Dr. Graham detailed two cases, "not in any way to be critical but to really hope we can all get together on this."

One 15-year-old boy already committed to Brannen Lake school for boys was in court there when a medical exam revealed deficiencies in both hearing and sight as well as mental problems.

Surgery was able to restore his hearing, said the doctor.

In the second case, a 10-year-old boy with a two-year record of behavioral problems was found to have a hearing problem which was 50 per cent correctable.

The boy is now in school, doing well with a hearing aid.

Studies suggest between 2 and 5 per cent of pupils in grades 1 to 6 have measurable hearing deficiencies, said Dr. Graham.

School Punishments Kept Top Secret

How often is the strap used in Greater Victoria schools?

That's "classified" information, assistant district superintendent A. J. Longmore said in an interview following Monday night's school board meeting.

It would give no indication, for example, of how much counselling went on before the strap was resorted to in any particular case.

Or of other methods of disciplining tried before the strap. Or attempts with parents to correct the problem first. Or the nature of the offence which led to the strap.

He did say that instances of strapping had declined about 30 per cent last year, despite increasing school enrolments.

Legislation on the rules of school disciplining calls for keeping a record of strapping offences, including reasons, but that record is for the eyes of senior educators and trustees only.

"The Act says the school is an agent of society and parents are having the school do a job that once was the role of just the parent," said Mr. Longmore.

But great strides have been made in the last five years on individual instruction for children, he added. If progress is as rapid in the next five years teachers will be in a much better position to meet the needs of pupils, including coping with their shortcomings.

Goat-Killing Cougar Shot At Metchosin

A marauding cougar was treed and shot Monday night after it killed a goat near Metchosin.

Gerry Ridley, 2973 Pickford, Colwood, armed with a .30-.30 rifle, killed the animal after his cougar hound chased it up a tree.

Mr. Ridley was called by Konrad Feldmann who saw the cougar dragging off a milk goat it had killed on Mr. Feldmann's three-acre farm at 4768 William Head Road, Metchosin.

Hunters in the area reported something had been scaring deer out of heavy bush in the area for the past week.

A number of cougar sightings have been reported near Metchosin, but there is no indication whether the six-foot animal Mr. Ridley killed was one of several.

Mrs. Feldmann said her children had been playing in the vicinity of Sherwood Creek where the animal appeared, but had seen no sign of it previously.

Rain Clouds Were Kind To Victoria

Rain that stopped air traffic and flooded roads and basements in much of the province late Monday was comparitively light in Victoria.

While 4.26 inches fell at Tofino and 1.52 at Vancouver, the highest mark in the capital was .62 on Gonzales Hill.

About 15 Air Canada flights between Vancouver and Victoria were cancelled late Monday and early today because of rain and fog.

In North Vancouver, one resident reported six feet of water in his basement and West Vancouver police said they received about 100 flooded basement calls.

The sky was expected to break up this afternoon and Wednesday should be "mainly sunny."

"That's kind of stretching a point," he added. "It's not the kind of mainly sunny you get in July."

Beaver Lake Motel Scheme Near Approval

Council gave first three readings to a sewage agreement authorization bylaw with Royal Oak Hotel over its sewage treatment system.

Municipal planner Tom Loney said his department has a development plan which shows four buildings located on the 63-acre property.

One is marked future development and the other three are labelled 16 suites each, or a total of 48. The buildings are two storeys with individual entrances to each unit.

He described it as "good-sized" development.

Zoning approval, for hotel-motel use including high-rise to 12 storeys, was granted by Saanich council in December, 1962, after a public hearing at which there was no opposition.

Mr. Loney said that in all likelihood, more information will be needed before a development permit is issued. The plan had been held in abeyance pending sewage considerations.

HIGHWAY ACCESS

He also said Saanich will talk to the provincial highways department about access from Patricia Bay Highway.

A pollution control board permit was issued for an oxidization ditch and irrigation sewage disposal system in January, 1965.

The sewage would be stored in winter and irrigated on 12 acres between May and August. The permit describes, in technical terms, the characteristics of the effluent.

Maximum discharge of sewage in a 12-hour period is 21,450 gallons and average discharge over 24 hours is the same.

One of the conditions of Saanich zoning approval was that sewage disposal be on the same parcel of land as the hotel-motel. In 1965, the Isherwood family, which owns the property, asked for removal of this condition and council agreed pending an agreement on regulation, control and operation of sewage disposal.

ISHERWOOD ABSTAINS

Ald. Foster Isherwood, who abstained from voting at council Monday night, said later Saanich municipality is involved in inspection and regulation, but not operation, and the metropolitan health board is involved in inspection of sewage disposal.

The bylaw approved (except for final reading) by council authorizes signing of the agreement. When this is done, council can then pass the amendment to the zoning bylaw removing the restriction that disposal be on the same parcel of land as the hotel-motel buildings.

In response to one question, Ald. Isherwood said the project and its disposal system have "nothing to do" with the municipal sewerage enterprise proposal since the land is miles from the boundary for extension of sanitary sewers.

No Housing Crisis, Only Bottlenecks, Says Campbell

By JOHN MIKA

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell Monday agreed with a private submission that there is no national housing crisis but he added there were several bottlenecks which need clearing.

Mr. Campbell was commenting on a brief presented to the opening session in Ottawa of Transport Minister Paul Hellyer's housing task force study.

Mortgate Insurance Company of Canada said the housing situation could not be called a crisis and Mr. Campbell told reporters here that the word is much too strong to describe the situation.

But he did say a number of specific difficulties must be isolated and resolved, particularly in the field of housing low-income families and meeting the needs of residents in large cities.

"I don't think the housing industry has done a very good background research job and I don't think the municipalities have helped by establishing a great many different housing standards and a great many different zoning laws," he added.

Mr. Campbell said a concerted effort is needed to provide a steady flow of mortgage funds into the housing sector.

MARKET

A more consistent market, without the swings in demand caused by loose and tight-money policies, would enable more manufacturers to invest capital in plants to produce prefabricated units which are especially suited for meeting the financial limits of low-income families," he said.

Mr. Campbell also released copies of an eight-page pamphlet on housing which his department will distribute at the Union of B.C. Municipalities convention in Vancouver this week to acquaint civic leaders with the various provincial and federal programs available to them in meeting housing needs of their communities.

ASSISTANCE

In a message at the start of the pamphlet, Mr. Campbell said many senior government programs for assisting financing of public housing "notably co-operative housing," could be used to far greater advantage than they have been.

"Not only private building companies and non-profit organizations have shown reluctance to become involved in the provision of housing, particularly low-cost housing.

"Municipalities, with few exceptions, have also shown reluctance, though they can obtain some forms of housing, like public housing, at no cost to themselves," his message said.

But, his message added, not everything can be undertaken by various government levels.

"Private enterprise has a responsibility too. Architects and builders have a responsibility to devise better techniques, better forms of development for housing."

Russia Leads Canada In Forest Cultivation

Russia's forest management is further advanced than Canada's, deputy forest minister F. S. McKinnon said Monday in an interview.

McKINNON
. . . crops of trees

He said he was particularly struck by the fact that old growth stands, as found in this province, existed only in parts of Siberia while everywhere else trees were being grown as crops.

Other aspects which caught his eye was a tight system of plant quarantine and post-quarantine fumigation as automatic treatment when exotic plants were traded among member republics of the U.S.S.R.

He also said all forestry graduates are recalled to their institutes every five years for refresher courses and "this is something which we in Canada should look at if we want to stay competitive."

Part of McKenzie Ave. Sinks But Engineers Not Worried

The trouble came in a stretch up to 20 feet wide and 100 feet long on the Simon Road section of McKenzie just west of Blenkinsop. The road dipped about 1½ feet but steps have been taken to grade it out.

Assistant municipal engineer, John Cowlin, said today crews earlier removed 11 feet of soft peat bog from top of soft clay.

Consulting engineers hired to make recommendations said that when peat bog is taken out and sand-gravel-rock is put in as fill, it is "considerably" heavier than the peat.

This resulted in settling, and Saancih decided on "surcharging" — building the road up to grade and putting down another load, of up to five feet, to compress it.

"Before we got the five feet on we had a failure on the north side," said Mr. Cowlin. "The side and part of the road sank about 1½ feet."

He said this sectin of McKenzie is unpaved and Saanich got what it wanted — settlement. He described the partial sinking as "nothing drastic."

Island Situation 'Critical' For Perishables Going Bad

By JIM HUME

Closer inspection of meat and perishable foods in transit will be asked of the provincial government.

The British Columbia Associated Boards of Health were told today that methods of transporting meat and other perishables on to northern Vancouver Island points was "appalling."

The meeting is being held in Vancouver, preceding the annual conference of the Union of B.C. Municipalities.

Delegates attending the annual conference of the ABH were first asked to endorse a resolution calling for an extension of meat inspection areas to all settled portions of the province. At present, these meat inspection areas exist only in the relatively heavily populated zones.

A Vancouver delegate objected to the resolution, saying that he felt inspection was only required at slaughterhouses.

His comment touched off an angry charge from Jack Lemmer, Port Alice, that people in the cities showed "an appalling ignorance of conditions existing in upper Island communities.

ROTTEN MEAT

"During the month of July in excess of 1,000 pounds of meat was condemned on arrival at Rumble Beach and Port Hardy. The meat had deteriorated so badly during transit that it just had to be thrown away."

Mr. Lemmer listed the condemned meat ranging from hindquarters of veal to pork loins and chicken breasts.

He said it was not sufficient to just inspect meat when it was at the slaughter house.

"I have never heard anything quite so ridiculous as the statement made by the Vancouvre delegate," Mr. Lemmer said.

'EXTREMELY SERIOUS'

The delegates finally approved a resolution calling on the provincial government to extend safeguards and inspection both at the slaughter house and at the in-transit level.

An earlier resolution concerning the danger of contamination of food stuffs by pesticides was also approved by the convention.

The resolution called for stricter enforcement of existing regulations which make it unlawful for pesticides or other dangerous substances to be transported in vehicles which are also used to carry food stuffs.

DRUG BENEFITS

Other resolutions approved this morning included a call for the provincial government to extend drug benefits under the medicare plan to all persons receiving a subsidy towards the premium costs of their medical insurance.

It was pointed out that while many people have up to 90 per cent of their doctors bills paid by the government, they are still unable to afford drugs prescribed.

Delegates also called on the provincial government to provide, without charge, measles vaccine to health departments and phsysicians in B.C. and introduce it into the regular immunization program as son as possible.

At present, parents pay the full cost for measles vaccine.

Angered Bike Smasher Fined $35

Court was told the child was riding a two-wheel bike on Head Street Aug. 25 when he ran into the back of a parked car. He was then cautioned by the accused but later while riding the bicycle ran down Morrissey's three-year-old child, who required hospital treatment.

Prosecutor Cory Stolte said the accused then took an axe and smashed the spokes of the bike and told the child to get his parents to come for it. He reportedly told the mother of the child he felt justified in smashing the bike but today told Magistrate William Ostler he was angry at the time of the incident.

Morrissey told the court he had twice sent notes to the mother asking if she wanted the bike repaired but she had told him no.

At this point the mother stood up in the courtroom gallery, asked if she could speak and said that at the time of the incident Morrissey had refused to pay any damage.

The magistrate made no order regarding damages saying that claims would have to be made in the civil courts.

Ask The Times

Q. Is it not a fact that anyone who has paid federal income tax may vote in a federal election?—E.F.W.

A. A person may vote in a federal election if he or she is 21 years old on or before polling day, is a Canadian citizen or British subject, has resided in Canada for the 12 months immediately preceeding polling day and, at a byelection only, is resident in the electoral district until polling day at the byelection. In addition there are disqualifications, for example, the chief electoral officer, assistant chief electoral officer, returning officers during tenure of office, prisoners or persons suffering from mental disease.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

New Office Block For City Centre To Cost $2 Million

A seven-story office block on the site of the old Woodward's building announced Monday will cost about $2,000,000.

Initial cost was reported to be about $1,400,000, based on the amount of the building permit taken out at city hall. Sources indicate additional features will increase the final figure.

Negotiations for major tenants of the block are still under way with Turnkey Developments of Vancouver, and will not be announced for at least a week, the company said today.

The company added that Turnkey Developpments itself was not the developer of the Montreal CIL building as reported earlier — the company was formed later by persons connected with its construction.

City Schools To Hold More Kindergartens

With school openings squared away, more room for kindergartens has been found in the Greater Victoria schools.

Full-time kindergartens will increase from four to eight effective Oc. 1, assistant district superintendent A. J. Longmore told trustees Monday night.

The change means one-third of the school district's kindergartens will operate a full program—2½ hours a day. Others hold classes in shifts.

"It seems kindergartens are going into areas of the city where parents can afford to send their children to private kindergartens," said trustee John Porteous.

He cited James Bay as a district with a critical shortage and said getting a kindergarten there should have top priority.

Ottawa Probes 'Tax Free Plant'

OTTAWA (CP) — An investigation is being made into the income tax position of a chemical and oil refinery project at Come-By-Chance, Nfld., being built with provincial aid, Finance Minister Benson said in the Commons Monday.

He said the question has arisen of whether this and "several other companies" are taxable and an investigation would soon be completed.

Max Saltsman (NDP—Waterloo) raised the issue in the House, referring to an editorial in the magazine Canadian Petroleum that says Premier Smallwood of Newfoundland and a private promoter have worked out a deal that will avoid income taxes on the Come-By-Chance plant.

Douglas Harkness (PC—Calgary Centre) said the Newfoundland operation could cause "very serious disruption" in the Canadian petroleum industry. In times of over-production, a tax-free producer could undercut competitors.

LOAN GUARANTEED

Canadian Petroleum says that under a deal arranged by Mr. Smallwood and American promoter John Shaheen the province will guarantee a $30,000,000 loan to be repaid by Mr. Shaheen over 30 years. At the end of this period Mr. Shaheen can buy the refinery at a nominal sum.

During the life of the agreement the plant will be owned by a provincial Crown corporation, the magazine adds, which will enjoy an exemption from income tax, provincial sales taxes of building materials and property taxes.

GRAIN

WINNIPEG (CP) — Prices were generally easier with most action in oilseeds in light trading today on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange.

Flax trading was mixed and there was some inter-month spreading. Exporters were buying on the scale down. Scattered commission house selling and hedge offerings in rapeseed met thin commercial support.

Oats and barley were barely active and there was thin exporter buying in rye.

Lakehead prices for class two, IWA and domestic wheat all were down ⅛ cent.

CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat futures fell more than three cents and set seasonal lows again under liquidation on the Board of Trade today. Trade in all pits was fairly active and mixed.

Rain in some sections of the country tended to influence buying of soybeans and corn futures. After these prices had advanced about a cent, profit-taking entered the pits and both commodities declined.

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

A lot of modern experts would disdain the two space response that Oswald Jacoby made to Helen Sobel Smith's opening heart bid. We would not say that they are nuts but rather that they are misguided. Jacoby was on his way to a slam and wanted to alert his partner right away.

Helen's three diamond rebid was normal, as was Jacoby's three hearts. Then Helen bid four clubs and it was up to Jacoby to do a little thinking. It was the second hand they had played together in 25 years and they were playing a cross between 1948 Goren and 1933 Culbertson or what might be called general common sense bidding.

Jacoby decided she was showing both the diamond and club aces as well as shortage in spades. How good were her trumps?

Culbertson had a method of finding out. The five no-trump grand slam force. Would Helen know about it? The bid disappeared in the '30s and has just come into expert popularity. There was nothing to lose. Helen would not pass at five no-trump. He bid it.

Helen said, "I guess I'm expected to do something." Then she thought awhile and bid the grand slam.

There was nothing to the play. With hearts and spades both breaking, anyone would make the grand slam but Helen exhibited the technique that would be expected of the greatest woman bridge player of all time. She won the heart in her own hand, led a spade to dummy's ace, a second heart to her hand, a second spade to dummy, drew the last trump and claimed the slam.

She had given herself a slight extra chance and would have made the contract against a 4-1 spade break if the four spades and long trump had been in the same hand.

Big Three Support Auto Pact

OTTAWA (CP) — Chrysler Corp. has linked the possibility of a new plant in Canada with removal of government regulations which is says affect costs and productivity.

President Ron W. Todgham of Chrysler, in a Aug. 15 letter to Trade Minister Pepin, which was tabled in the Commons Monday, said the parent Chrysler Corp. has been "looking with favor" on the prospect of locating a new major plant in Canada.

"The elimination of those factors which result from government regulation or legislation, and which increase our costs, will improve our ability to attract such a plant to Canada," he said.

Mr. Todgham's letter, reviewing performance of the Canada-U.S. auto pact over its first three years, was made public along with similar letters from the heads of the General Motors and Ford subsidiaries in Canada.

All three letters spoke favorably of the pact but complained of "impediments" to its full implementation.

Mr. Todgham called for Canadian efforts to ensure that the agreement would continue on a long-term basis to eliminate uneasiness over a possible termination.

E. H. Walker, president and general manager of General Motors of Canada Ltd., said the industry has had to operate "under certain conditions which appear contrary to the basic objectives of the agreement such as duties and sales tax on plant, construction material equipment, tooling and shipping containers."

Karl E. Scott, president of Ford Motor Co. of Canada, also asked for removal of "remaining impediments which hamper efficient operations in Canada." He said these had been summarized in a previous letter to the government.

Molson Appointment

MONTREAL (CP) — D. G. Willmot, president of Anthes Imperial Ltd. before its recent merger with Molson Breweries Ltd., has been appointed president and chief executive officer of Molson Industries Ltd., the company's new name.

Ottawa Probes 'Tax Free Plant'

OTTAWA (CP) — An investigation is being made into the income tax position of a chemical and oil refinery project at Come-By-Chance, Nfld., being built with provincial aid, Finance Minister Benson said in the Commons Monday.

He said the question has arisen of whether this and "several other companies" are taxable and an investigation would soon be completed.

Max Saltsman (NDP—Waterloo) raised the issue in the House, referring to an editorial in the magazine Canadian Petroleum that says Premier Smallwood of Newfoundland and a private promoter have worked out a deal that will avoid income taxes on the Come-By-Chance plant.

Douglas Harkness (PC—Calgary Centre) said the Newfoundland operation could cause "very serious disruption" in the Canadian petroleum industry. In times of over-production, a tax-free producer could undercut competitors.

LOAN GUARANTEED

Canadian Petroleum says that under a deal arranged by Mr. Smallwood and American promoter John Shaheen the province will guarantee a $30,000,000 loan to be repaid by Mr. Shaheen over 30 years. At the end of this period Mr. Shaheen can buy the refinery at a nominal sum.

During the life of the agreement the plant will be owned by a provincial Crown corporation, the magazine adds, which will enjoy an exemption from income tax, provincial sales taxes of building materials and property taxes.

GRAIN

WINNIPEG (CP) — Prices were generally easier with most action in oilseeds in light trading today on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange.

Flax trading was mixed and there was some inter-month spreading. Exporters were buying on the scale down. Scattered commission house selling and hedge offerings in rapeseed met thin commercial support.

Oats and barley were barely active and there was thin exporter buying in rye.

Lakehead prices for class two, IWA and domestic wheat all were down ⅛ cent.

CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat futures fell more than three cents and set seasonal lows again under liquidation on the Board of Trade today. Trade in all pits was fairly active and mixed.

Rain in some sections of the country tended to influence buying of soybeans and corn futures. After these prices had advanced about a cent, profit-taking entered the pits and both commodities declined.

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce Monday opened a branch bank in the lobby of a high school manned by students.

Altogether, 100 commercial course students will rotate as tellers to gain practical experience in banking, which is part of their course. They will not be paid.
